Kennedy, Ike Confer On Cuban Crisis

Camp David Conference Set Today

Will Seek To Rally National Support For Critical Steps

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy meets with former President Dwight D. Eisenhower today in an evident bid to rally strong national support for critical steps which he may consider necessary to deal with the increasingly dangerous Cuban crisis.

A White House announcement of the session—at Camp David, Md. — emphasized Cuba as the topic for the conference. But it did not rule out the prospect that Kennedy could discuss with his predecessor a broad range of intensifying cold war conflicts with the Soviet Union.

Before flying to Camp David by helicopter Kennedy met with the National Security Council, presumably to discuss possible future moves against the pro-Communist government of Cuba in the wake of this week's abortive anti-Castro invasion.

In the midst of these developments, the President was reported to have ordered a thorough study of reasons for the defeat of the rebel invasion attempt which began last weekend with the United States' moral support —and, it was generally believed here, with some backing of U. S. money and arms.

The President was understood to be concerned about what some authorities called a failure to calculate accurately in advance the strength of Prime Minister Fidel Castro's military reaction to the rebel assault as well as possible errors in intelligence.

White House news secretary Pierre Salinger disclosed Friday night that Kennedy and Eisenhower would meet at Camp David, the Catoctin Mountain retreat near Gettysburg, Pa., which Eisenhower used for conferences with foreign leaders.

The President arranged the luncheon session in a telephone call to Eisenhower Friday morning. The former chief executive was at his Gettysburg farm.

Salinger said Kennedy wanted to bring Eisenhower up to date on the Cuban situation, believing that "as leader of the Republican party and as former president he should know what the situation is."

Salinger also disclosed that Kennedy had been in indirect contact with Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, another Republican leader, and that he had conferred Friday with Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

The contacts with Republicans followed Kennedy's meeting at the White House Thursday with former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, his Republican opponent for the presidency last year.

Nixon said in New York Friday night that he had told Kennedy he would support him "even to the commitment of American armed forces."

U.S. Set Up Invasion Of Cuba, K Says

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev told President Kennedy today the invasion of Cuba is "a crime which has revolted the whole world."

"It has been established incontroveritbly that it was the United States that prepared the intervention, financed, armed and transported the mercenary bands which invaded Cuba," Khrushchev said in a message to President Kennedy, handed to E. L. Freers, U.S. charge d'affaires.

Khrushchev was replying to a communication several days ago from Kennedy.

As distributed by Tass, the Soviet news agency, the Khrushchev statement referred to a Kennedy statement that rockets that might be used against the United States could be stationed in Cuba, with the inference that this posed problems for the United States in relation to the whole Western hemisphere.

"Mr. President, you are following a very dangerous path," Khrushchev said. "Ponder that."

Anti-Castro Appeal

Don't Surrender, Help Is On Way, Rebels Are Told

By The Associated Press

An anti-Castro radio broadcast from an island off Central America today told two rebel battalions apparently fighting on Cuban soil that help was on the way and urged them not to surrender.

The appeal from Swan Island was made a few hours after the Castro government put before Havana television cameras some prisoners captured after last weekend's invasion. One admitted their mission failed and said not many rebels had escaped. Others said propaganda from Swan Island and North America had misled them.

The Swan Island broadcast, monitored by the Associated Press in Miami, Fla., also repeated troop movement instructions it had sent out during the night.

It had told earlier of new small landings made in Cuba, but no other source confirmed this. Some rebel sources in Miami did say, however, that between 500 and 1,500 guerrillas were headed for Cuba for a new invasion assault.

A dispatch from Havana described the Cuban capital as a city of fear and suspicion. It said a new wave of arrests and detentions reached into almost every family. Suspects jammed swollen jails and living conditions were described as growing worse.

The New York Times quoted a diplomatic source in Washington as saying Maj. Ernesto Guevara, one of Castro's top aides, was seriously wounded in the head earlier this week. The Times said the information reached Washington from a diplomatic source in Havana.

The diplomatic source said a neurosurgeon was sent to a provincial hospital where Guevara allegedly was taken. Guevara, 32, is Cuba's economic czar.

The government radio network said Prime Minister Fidel Castro, unseen in public for almost a week, was personally directing mop-up operations in the interior against the surviving rebel invaders who are trying to overthrow his pro-Communist regime.

A Havana television station Friday night prepared the people for big "Castro Day" victory celebrations with a five-hour live interview of prisoners the government claims it captured during the abortive invasion by Cuban exiles.

Will Fight Red Threat

2 Nations Pledge To Back Kennedy

URUGUAIANA, Brazil (AP) — Brazil and Argentina pledged themselves Friday night to fight Communist penetration in the Western Hemisphere and backed President Kennedy's "Alliance for Progress" program for Latin America.

In a historic move, Presidents Janio Quadros of Brazil and Arturo Frondizi of Argentina also agreed to consult each other permanently on all common matters and to coordinate all their actions within the continent. It is the first time in history South America's two biggest nations have joined in such close cooperation, one veteran diplomat said.

The leaders ended a two-day conference here by issuing four documents: a declaration of principles, amounting to a firm stand against Communist penetration into Latin America; the convention on friendship and permanent consultation; and two declarations dealing with economic and cultural matters.

Meeting in this southern Brazilian port across the Uruguay River from Argentina, Quadros and Frondizi were full of praise for Kennedy's Latin American program.

They said the long-sought goals for Latin America, is contained in the spirit of the Bogota Charter, "have just received their most valuable support in the program of 'Alliance for Progress' proposed by the President of the United States of America."

Their document suggested, further, that Washington's plan be augmented by Brazil's own "Operation Pan America," a plan originated by former Brazilian President Juscelino Kubitschek.

In their joint declaration of principles, Quadros and Frondizi pledged firm support of "Western and Christian" principles. Though the 700-word communique never mentioned communism by name, it aligned the two big nations against alien interference in the hemisphere — an indirect reference to the revolt-torn affairs in Cuba.

Not Defeat, Council Declares

Soviet Planes And Tanks Blamed In Rebel Losses

NEW YORK (AP)—The Cuban revolutionary council says MIG aircraft and Soviet tanks were responsible for the losses suffered by its forces on Cuba's beaches—a reversal it refused to call a defeat.

"It is a setback," said council leader Jose Miro Cardona, who displayed tears at times during a news conference Friday.

He read in firm, solemn tones a prepared statement in which the council declared, "MIG aircraft and Soviet tanks have inflicted a grave reverse to Cuba's cause."

But he added "the majority of those who landed are actually fighting. It was one more of many landings that have taken place and will continue to take place.

"This dramatic episode of total war, unleashed against our people by the Soviet empire, necessarily was played out under disadvantageous conditions that impeded proper coordination between the forces inside the country and those that returned to the fatherland."

Miro Cardona repudiated "most emphatically the intervention carried on by the Soviet Union in Cuba through its agents, its tanks, its airplanes and its 'technicians.'"

Miro Cardona, whose son and those of two other council aides were among those taken captive by the forces of Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro, appealed for an end to executions on the island.

He said he had cabled Pope John XXIII, urging him to intercede through the International Red Cross to bring a halt to the Castro firing squads.

Similar appeals were sent to the United Nations and to the presidents of 11 South and Central American nations, he said.

The thick-set leader and his top aides dropped out of sight after last weekend's Cuban landings. Miro Cardona reappeared Wednesday in Washington for talks with President Kennedy.

It was speculated that Miro Cardona and some of the leaders may have been with the revolutionary forces right up to the time they landed in Cuba.

INSURGENTS SEIZE POWER IN ALGIERS

U.N. Makes Plea In U.S., Cuba Strife

Urges Members To Remove Tension Between Countries

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The General Assembly called on all U.N. members early today for action to remove tension between Cuba and the United States.

The 99-nation assembly adopted a U.S.-backed resolution to that effect after knocking out a key provision that asked Latin American countries especially to help settle the trouble.

It turned down a Mexican proposal, supported by Cuba and the Soviet bloc, which appealed to all countries to see that their territories and resources were not used to promote a civil war in Cuba.

The vote on the first proposal, sponsored by seven Latin American countries, was 59-13. Cuba, Guinea, Lebanon, Morocco and the Soviet bloc were opposed. There were 14 abstentions.

The United States and the sponsors voted for the final text even after the assembly had failed to give the necessary two-thirds majority to a vital paragraph with which the resolution had come from the political committee.

That paragraph asked U.N. members "which belong to the Organization of American States to lend their assistance" toward a peaceful settlement and to report back to the U.N." as soon as possible, within the present year.

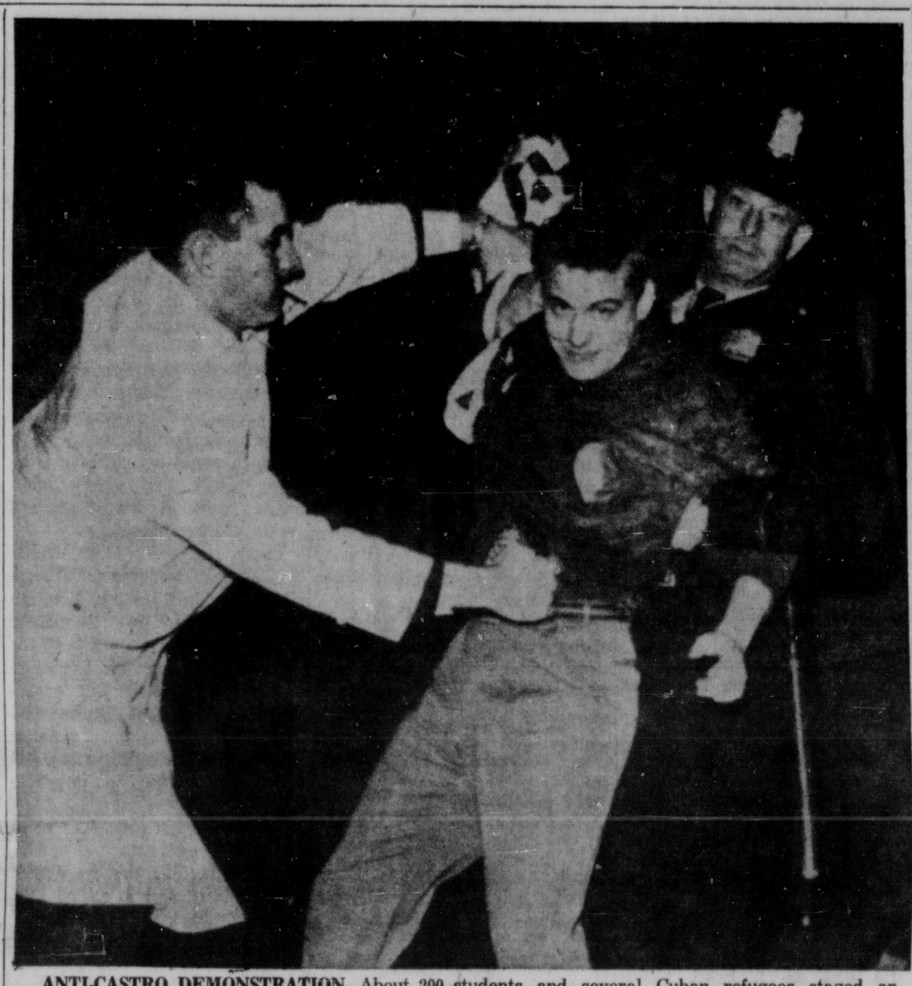

The assembly gave it a vote of 56-32, with 8 abstentions. The committee had recommended the provision Friday with a vote of 56-28, with 14 abstentions. In the assembly, Ethiopia, Mali, Nigeria and Upper Volta switched from abstention to no to defeat it.

The U.S. view was that the outcome was "not a disaster," since the OAS was still mentioned elsewhere in the resolution.

The proposal did not spell out Cuba's charges. Nor did it set forth U.S. denials that the United States was responsible for the landing of Cuban refugees who returned to their homeland Monday to fight against Premier Fidel Castro's regime.

But it did say that statements made by the two countries in the committee's debate, begun Monday, disclosed a situation "the continuance of which could endanger world peace."

The vote on the Mexican resolution was 41-35, with 29 abstentions —far short of the necessary two-thirds.

ANTI-CASTRO DEMONSTRATION. About 200 students and several Cuban refugees staged an anti-Castro demonstration for several hours near the Soviet Embassy in Washington Friday. Police arrested five of the demonstrators on charges of disorderly conduct for picketing too close to the Embassy. One of the five is shown being removed from the Embassy driveway by police. $100 Million Congo Peace Fund Okayed

Financial Disaster Averted By U.N. As It Ends Session

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) —The General Assembly wound up its marathon 15th session early today after staving off financial disaster by approving a $100 million Congo peace operation fund.

The assembly finally agreed on the measure after hours of wrangling and corridor haggling that followed an earlier attempt to get the required two-thirds majority for a similar proposal. The final vote was 54 to 15 with 23 abstentions.

Latin American nations who had opposed the move finally yielded after they faced an alternative of the assembly staying in session until the financial problem was solved.

The wrangle over Congo finances reflected the stormy tone of the session which was highlighted by the Soviet Union's all-out attacks on Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold and the entire U.N. Congo operation.

The session opened on a dramatic note with an all-star cast headed up by Soviet Premier Khrushchev. It came to a turbuent end with the United States and the Communist bloc swapping bitter charges over Fidel Castro's Cuba.

In one of its final acts, the assembly adopted a resolution calling on all countries to take whatever peaceful steps they can to remove existing tensions between the United States and Cuba.

The proposal was adopted 59 to 13 after the assembly upset a decision of its main political committee and killed off a provision assigning the role of peacemaker to Latin American nations. The United States had backed the defeated proposal.

A high spot of the session was the entry of 16 new African nations and the young Republic of Cyprus in the world family.

White Breaks Speed Record In X15 Plane

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—A test pilot coolly describes as "just routine" a trouble-plagued flight in the X15 rocket plane that set a new controlled flight speed record of 3,140 miles an hour.

Air Force Maj. Bob White zoomed more than 50 miles a minute to an altitude of 103,000 feet Friday, thus breaking the old record of 2,905 m.p.h. he had set last March 7.

There were tense moments during the 11-minute flight—when the engine quit temporarily and moments later when the swept-wing Dart's pressurized cabin sprang a leak.

White later brushed aside the miscues, saying, "We expect some unusual things to show up in an experimental program."

Seconds after the X15 dropped from its B52 mother plane at 45,000 feet, its rocket engine quit. The X15 dropped 7,000 feet while White frantically tried to re-start the engine. At 37,000 feet the rocket engine's 57,000 pounds of thrust came on at full throttle, slamming White back in the cockpit seat with a force three times that of gravity. Over the radio came White's unemotional: "That was quite a boost."

White pulled the X15 into a climbing angle of 30 degrees and the rocket plane shot like a bullet on its first full power run. At 80,000 feet, White had his record and shut off the engine.

His momentum carried him still higher. At 90,000 feet, the cabin sprang a leak and White compensated by inflating his space-type flying suit. At 103,000 feet the X15 reached the top of its flight and White eased the plane's nose gently into a glide back to a landing on a nearby dry lake.

British Back DeGaulle In Algeria Crisis

Certain President Will Restore His Authority There

LONDON (AP)—British authorities expressed confidence today that iron-willed President Charles de Gaulle has the resources and popular backing to restore his authority over mutinous army men in Algeria.

The dawn revolt in the troubled North African territory nevertheless pained and surprised government officials here. They have been nursing high hopes of De Gaulle's bid to make peace with Moslem leaders.

The Foreign Office withheld all formal comment on the dramatic grab for power by four defiant retired generals and their followers. An official explained Britain regards the development in Algeria as the internal business of France.

Aides Sent By DeGaulle To Nip Coup

Ex-Generals Seek To Stave Off Any Peace Negotiations

PARIS (AP) — Four retired French generals seized power in Algiers today and attempted to force President Charles de Gaulle to abandon plans for negotiations with the Algerian rebels. De Gaulle reacted quickly, sending aides to Algeria to quash the coup.

The insurgent leaders were backed by tough paratroopers who brought down the French government in 1958 for the same reason —fear that Algeria might become independent from France.

Three years ago the unstable government of the Fourth French Republic proved a pushover. This time the right-wing rebels must contend with De Gaulle and his widespread support in France.

Reaction from Algerian rebel headquarters in Tunis also came quickly and introduced the factor of the Moslems' new confidence.

Rebel Premier Ferhat Abbas, leader of the 6½-year-old rebellion against France, called on his followers in Algeria to help break the insurrection.

"You must organize yourselves to confront the provocations of the paratroopers," he said, in a radio broadcast, recalling the incidents of last December when moslems poured into the streets to demonstrate their support for Algerian independence.

Sent from Paris by De Gaulle were Algerian Affairs Minister Louis Joxe and Gen. Jean Olie. They were ordered by to take over civilian and military command from Jean Morin and Gen. Gernand Gambiez, who were being held by the military insurgents.

It was not immediately clear how much of Algeria was under the control of the insurgents. Communications from Algiers to Paris opened briefly and then closed.

The insurgent leaders took over the government buildings of Algiers and in a broadcast over Algiers Radio claimed leadership

White Breaks Speed Record In X15 Plane

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—A test pilot coolly describes as "just routine" a trouble-plagued flight in the X15 rocket plane that set a new controlled flight speed record of 3,140 miles an hour.

Air Force Maj. Bob White zoomed more than 50 miles a minute to an altitude of 103,000 feet Friday, thus breaking the old record of 2,905 m.p.h. he had set last March 7.

There were tense moments during the 11-minute flight—when the engine quit temporarily and moments later when the swept-wing Dart's pressurized cabin sprang a leak.

White later brushed aside the miscues, saying, "We expect some unusual things to show up in an experimental program."

Seconds after the X15 dropped from its B52 mother plane at 45,000 feet, its rocket engine quit. The X15 dropped 7,000 feet while White frantically tried to re-start the engine. At 37,000 feet the rocket engine's 57,000 pounds of thrust came on at full throttle, slamming White back in the cockpit seat with a force three times that of gravity. Over the radio came White's unemotional: "That was quite a boost."

White pulled the X15 into a climbing angle of 30 degrees and the rocket plane shot like a bullet on its first full power run. At 80,000 feet, White had his record and shut off the engine.

His momentum carried him still higher. At 90,000 feet, the cabin sprang a leak and White compensated by inflating his space-type flying suit. At 103,000 feet the X15 reached the top of its flight and White eased the plane's nose gently into a glide back to a landing on a nearby dry lake.

British Back DeGaulle In Algeria Crisis

Certain President Will Restore His Authority There

LONDON (AP)—British authorities expressed confidence today that iron-willed President Charles de Gaulle has the resources and popular backing to restore his authority over mutinous army men in Algeria.

The dawn revolt in the troubled North African territory nevertheless pained and surprised government officials here. They have been nursing high hopes of De Gaulle's bid to make peace with Moslem leaders.

The Foreign Office withheld all formal comment on the dramatic grab for power by four defiant retired generals and their followers. An official explained Britain regards the development in Algeria as the internal business of France.

Escape Conflict With Laws

7 Amish Families Move To Canada—It's Cheaper

WOOSTER, Ohio (AP)—Seven Amish families in this area have moved to Canada because farm land is cheaper there and they will escape conflict with laws on schools, social security, and military draft.

About 50 persons made the migration early this month to Owen Sound, an Ontario community about 100 miles northwest of Toronto. There they joined an Amish settlement of 19 families.

Moving their families were Levi L. Shetler Sr., 60, of northern Holmes County; his five sons—Levi Jr., Jacob, Samuel, Emery and Ben—and a son-in-law, Moses E. Hershberger.

They sold their land and most of their farm equipment and livestock at public auction and loaded the rest of their belongings in two railroad box cars for shipment to Canada. The families left by train from Millersburg at midnight April 4.

The Shetler clan refused to discuss the move with newsmen, but Rudy S. Yoder of Navarre, an Amish member of the same church the families attended, explained:

"The families are going primarily because land is getting scarce and prices for it are high here. But the school conflict and problems with social security and military training also enter into it."

The Emery Shetler family lived near Brewster in Stark County and the Ben Shetlers moved from Medina County. The other families lived in Holmes County.

The Amish are a quaint religious people who live the simple life without many of the modern conveniences Americans rely on. They contend attending school beyond the eighth grade would make their children worldly and lure them from the Amish way of life.

Ohio law requires that children attend school until they are 16 years old.

The Shetler clan belongs to the Swartzentruber Amish sect, an ultra - conservative group which broke away from the main church about 50 years ago. The sect opposes service in hospitals or other civilian work in lieu of military service during peacetime.

Yoder said the Swartzentruber sect disagrees with the social security plan "because we have always taught our children to take care of the older people."

"We also are opposed to universal military training in peacetime," he continued. "During wartime we did government work in hospitals and in conservation, but we can't approve of this in peacetime."

He said that in Canada a child could finish elementary school at the age of 14 if his grades are good and not be forced to attend high school "except in large cities." The Amish children will be able to attend old-fashioned, one-room schools in Canada and the Amish will not have to build schools of their own, he added.

Spring plowing and planting have started in this area and there has been no indication other Amish families soon will move to Canada.

The Amish community in Wayne, Holmes, Stark, Tuscarawas and Coshocton counties numbers about 12,000.

Algeria

over all of Algeria and the Sahari.

Although the rebels led by Gen. Maurice Challe, former French commander in chief in Algeria, claimed to control the whole territory this was disputed by the De Gaulle government in Paris. It said loyal soldiers were in control outside the City of Algiers.

Premier Michel Debre said the rising was "a premeditated and undisciplined act" by retired generals. He said they had seized the government buildings in Algiers but "in all the rest of the territory the situation is normal in every respect. The government is taking all necessary measures to insure that force rests with the law."

Alone with Challe the rebel communique broadcast by Algiers Radio was also signed by Paratroop Gen. Raoul Salan, who played a prominent role in the 1958 rising in Algeria that brought De Gaulle back to power.

Salan recently has exiled himself in Spain. It was not believed that he had arrived on Algerian soil but he was expected momentarily.

The rebel communique said "The powers held by the civil authorities have entirely passed to military authorities."

French officers who have fought the Algerian nationalists in the 6½-year rebellion have been among the bitterest opponents of De Gaulle's self-determination policy for Algeria.

Other generals who joined the revolt were Air Force Gen. Edmond Jouhaud and Army Gen. Henri Zeller.

After the communique, Algiers Radio said, "the individuals having participated directly in the attempt to abandon Algeria and the Sahara will be placed under arrest and brought before a military tribunal."

The radio declared a "state of seige" in Algeria but promised that all "fundamental liberties and guarantees assured by the constitution are entirely maintained."

The first reaction among Europeans in the city was one of elation. Cars streamed through the streets blasting their horns in the three-two cadence that means "Algerie, Francaise (Algeria is French)."

How many troops were involved in the sudden coup was unknown. Nor was it clear yet whether the army claim to control of all Algeria was true.

There was no violence in the pre-dawn military rising.

Challe is a tough, round-faced air force general who was once commander in chief of NATO's central European forces under U.S. Gen. Lauris Norstad. He recently resigned from that post in protest against De Gaulle's policies in Algeria.

Challe's principle military support appeared to be the tough 1st Foreign Legion Paratroop Regiment of about 3,500 men. These were the men who took over the government buildings. Just how many more army units—of the 500,000 men in Algeria—were with Challe was not initially clear.

Among 2 Key Witnesses

Columbia U. Professor Due At Eichmann Trial

JERUSALEM (AP)—A Columbia University professor was among two key witnesses named today who will testify in the trial of Adolf Eichmann about the extent of the destruction of European Jews during World War II.

Israel charges Eichmann, a department chief in the Nazi Gestapo played a major part in the slaughter of an estimated 6 million Jews including a million children.

Dr. Salo Wittmayer Baron, an authority on Jewish affairs and professor of Jewish history at Columbia, in New York City, is scheduled to take the witness stand when the hearings in Jerusalem resume Monday.

The state also expects to call Dr. Benno Cohn, one-time leader of the Jewish community in Berlin.

Together, they are expected to outline the status of the Jews in Europe before the war, the first steps taken against them by the Nazis, and the dimensions of the blood-letting that followed.

Eichmann consistently minimizes his role in this.

"I never killed a Jew," he says. "I never killed any man. I am not anti-Semitic."

He firmly contends that, as chief of the Gestapo, "Jewish affairs section," he was concerned almost entirely with rounding up Jews in various countries and arranging for their transportation to death camps.

However, Capt. Avner Less, one of the interrogators of Eichmann, brought out in Eichmann's own words, four instances that indicate he was not a minor executive engaged in merely collecting Jews.

They were:

1. His presence at the "Wannsee Conference" in Berlin, Jan. 20, 1942. This was a high-level gathering of Gestapo chiefs who were told that Adolf Hitler had ordered mass extermination as "the final solution of the Jewish question." Eichmann says that Reinhard Heydrich, security police chief, ordered him to attend, and that he spoke not one word.

2. A "secret-urgent" letter that he signed in 1941, ordering Nazi agents to report on art treasures owned by Jews in Nazi-occupied Europe. Eichmann indicated that Herman Goering, No. 2 in the Nazi hierarchy, wanted these objects. He conceded that this letter had nothing to do with "technical details of transportation."

3. A document relating to the speed-up of deportation of Jews from Hungary, and another relaying the word that Nazi authorities would not authorize the emigration of Hungarian Jews to Palestine, via Switzerland.

4. His arrest of a Protestant bishop in Berlin after "complaints" that the bishop had intervened on behalf of the Jews there. "I hated to do it," Eichmann said, "because my father was a Presbyterian elder in Linz. But I couldn't do anything."

In another recording, Eichmann said: "If somebody told me, "Your father is a traitor," and I was ordered to kill him, I would have done so without hesitation."

Escape Conflict With Laws

7 Amish Families Move To Canada—It's Cheaper

WOOSTER, Ohio (AP)—Seven Amish families in this area have moved to Canada because farm land is cheaper there and they will escape conflict with laws on schools, social security, and military draft.

About 50 persons made the migration early this month to Owen Sound, an Ontario community about 100 miles northwest of Toronto. There they joined an Amish settlement of 19 families.

Moving their families were Levi L. Shetler Sr., 60, of northern Holmes County; his five sons—Levi Jr., Jacob, Samuel, Emery and Ben—and a son-in-law, Moses E. Hershberger.

They sold their land and most of their farm equipment and livestock at public auction and loaded the rest of their belongings in two railroad box cars for shipment to Canada. The families left by train from Millersburg at midnight April 4.

The Shetler clan refused to discuss the move with newsmen, but Rudy S. Yoder of Navarre, an Amish member of the same church the families attended, explained:

"The families are going primarily because land is getting scarce and prices for it are high here. But the school conflict and problems with social security and military training also enter into it."

The Emery Shetler family lived near Brewster in Stark County and the Ben Shetlers moved from Medina County. The other families lived in Holmes County.

The Amish are a quaint religious people who live the simple life without many of the modern conveniences Americans rely on. They contend attending school beyond the eighth grade would make their children worldly and lure them from the Amish way of life.

Ohio law requires that children attend school until they are 16 years old.

The Shetler clan belongs to the Swartzentruber Amish sect, an ultra - conservative group which broke away from the main church about 50 years ago. The sect opposes service in hospitals or other civilian work in lieu of military service during peacetime.

Yoder said the Swartzentruber sect disagrees with the social security plan "because we have always taught our children to take care of the older people."

"We also are opposed to universal military training in peacetime," he continued. "During wartime we did government work in hospitals and in conservation, but we can't approve of this in peacetime."

He said that in Canada a child could finish elementary school at the age of 14 if his grades are good and not be forced to attend high school "except in large cities." The Amish children will be able to attend old-fashioned, one-room schools in Canada and the Amish will not have to build schools of their own, he added.

Spring plowing and planting have started in this area and there has been no indication other Amish families soon will move to Canada.

The Amish community in Wayne, Holmes, Stark, Tuscarawas and Coshocton counties number about 12,000.

West End Man Hurt In Fall Down Steps

Francis Connelly, 46, of 839 W. 9th St. was admitted Friday night with head injuries, including cuts and abrasions of the left forehead.

Police said they were notified at 9 p. m. and found Connelly lying in the street at his home. Officers said there was no indication of an auto accident and surmised that the victim was attempting to climb some cement steps to his home when he fell.

Co. plant in nearby Norwood, faces two years in prison on conviction for income tax evasion involving $10,000 in kickbacks. U.S. District Court Judge John Druffel set the penalty Friday and added to the term a year and a day of probation. The president of a New York firm said he paid Myers the money in 1954 and 1955 during purchase of scrap copper. Myers contended the payments were gifts.

Algeria

over all of Algeria and the Sahari.

Although the rebels led by Gen. Maurice Challe, former French commander in chief in Algeria, claimed to control the whole territory this was disputed by the De Gaulle government in Paris. It said loyal soldiers were in control outside the City of Algiers.

Premier Michel Debre said the rising was "a premeditated and undisciplined act" by retired generals. He said they had seized the government buildings in Algiers but "in all the rest of the territory the situation is normal in every respect. The government is taking all necessary measures to insure that force rests with the law."

Alone with Challe the rebel communique broadcast by Algiers Radio was also signed by Paratroop Gen. Raoul Salan, who played a prominent role in the 1958 rising in Algeria that brought De Gaulle back to power.

Salan recently has exiled himself in Spain. It was not believed that he had arrived on Algerian soil but he was expected momentarily.

The rebel communique said "The powers held by the civil authorities have entirely passed to military authorities."

French officers who have fought the Algerian nationalists in the 6½-year rebellion have been among the bitterest opponents of De Gaulle's self-determination policy for Algeria.

Other generals who joined the revolt were Air Force Gen. Edmond Jouhaud and Army Gen. Henri Zeller.

After the communique, Algiers Radio said, "the individuals having participated directly in the attempt to abandon Algeria and the Sahara will be placed under arrest and brought before a military tribunal."

The radio declared a "state of seige" in Algeria but promised that all "fundamental liberties and guarantees assured by the constitution are entirely maintained."

The first reaction among Europeans in the city was one of elation. Cars streamed through the streets blasting their horns in the three-two cadence that means "Algerie, Francaise (Algeria is French)."

How many troops were involved in the sudden coup was unknown. Nor was it clear yet whether the army claim to control of all Algeria was true.

There was no violence in the pre-dawn military rising.

Challe is a tough, round-faced air force general who was once commander in chief of NATO's central European forces under U.S. Gen. Lauris Norstad. He recently resigned from that post in protest against De Gaulle's policies in Algeria.

Challe's principle military support appeared to be the tough 1st Foreign Legion Paratroop Regiment of about 3,500 men. These were the men who took over the government buildings. Just how many more army units—of the 500,000 men in Algeria—were with Challe was not initially clear.

2 Receive Jail Terms For Buying Girls Beer

Two district men cited for contributing to the delinquency of two 17-year-old East Liverpool Girls received jail sentences Friday afternoon from Juvenile Judge Louis Tobin.

The two girls have been in Juvenile Court before and must report each week to Juvenile Officer Chris Pusey and were placed in temporary custody of the Columbiana County Welfare Department.

Ralph Fraser, bartender at the Rock Camp district tavern, earlier was fined $100 and given a suspended 10-day term for selling drinks to minors while Newtz was fined $200 and costs and given 10 days in earlier hearings after the arrests Wednesday night by Ohio State Liquor Control agents.

Among 2 Key Witnesses

Columbia U. Professor Due At Eichmann Trial

JERUSALEM (AP)—A Columbia University professor was among two key witnesses named today who will testify in the trial of Adolf Eichmann about the extent of the destruction of European Jews during World War II.

Israel charges Eichmann, a department chief in the Nazi Gestapo played a major part in the slaughter of an estimated 6 million Jews including a million children.

Dr. Salo Wittmayer Baron, an authority on Jewish affairs and professor of Jewish history at Columbia, in New York City, is scheduled to take the witness stand when the hearings in Jerusalem resume Monday.

The state also expects to call Dr. Benno Cohn, one-time leader of the Jewish community in Berlin.

Together, they are expected to outline the status of the Jews in Europe before the war, the first steps taken against them by the Nazis, and the dimensions of the blood-letting that followed.

Eichmann consistently minimizes his role in this.

"I never killed a Jew," he says. "I never killed any man. I am not anti-Semitic."

He firmly contends that, as chief of the Gestapo, "Jewish affairs section," he was concerned almost entirely with rounding up Jews in various countries and arranging for their transportation to death camps.

However, Capt. Avner Less, one of the interrogators of Eichmann, brought out in Eichmann's own words, four instances that indicate he was not a minor executive engaged in merely collecting Jews.

They were:

1. His presence at the "Wannsee Conference" in Berlin, Jan. 20, 1942. This was a high-level gathering of Gestapo chiefs who were told that Adolf Hitler had ordered mass extermination as "the final solution of the Jewish question." Eichmann says that Reinhard Heydrich, security police chief, ordered him to attend, and that he spoke not one word.

2. A "secret-urgent" letter that he signed in 1941, ordering Nazi agents to report on art treasures owned by Jews in Nazi-occupied Europe. Eichmann indicated that Herman Goering, No. 2 in the Nazi hierarchy, wanted these objects. He conceded that this letter had nothing to do with "technical details of transportation."

3. A document relating to the speed-up of deportation of Jews from Hungary, and another relaying the word that Nazi authorities would not authorize the emigration of Hungarian Jews to Palestine, via Switzerland.

4. His arrest of a Protestant bishop in Berlin after "complaints" that the bishop had intervened on behalf of the Jews there. "I hated to do it," Eichmann said, "because my father was a Presbyterian elder in Linz. But I couldn't do anything."

In another recording, Eichmann said: "If somebody told me, 'Your father is a traitor,' and I was ordered to kill him, I would have done so without hesitation."

Thin Girls Have Everything To Gain

The story goes that in the travels of the Three Princes of Serendip, they were always discovering, by chance or by sagacity, pleasant things they did not seek. And so we have the coined word — serendipity — which means the gift of finding valuable things not sought for directly. That fairy tale word can come true for you thin girls—for so many rewarding extras can accrue with a weight boost.

Ida Jean Kain

Here are some of the benefits that come with changing to Grade-A nutrition: Freedom from "nerves." Added pounds padding the nerve endings serve as a buffer to the nervous system. More energy is another bonus — followed by an extra fillip of fine feeling.

WITH ALL THIS in mind it will seem well worth while to make the effort to change your pattern of living and cultivate good eating habits.

As I write this concluding column in the thin girl series, I am well aware that gaining measures must be suited to your individual way of life. This is particularly true regarding rest periods. In experiments with underweight children and adults, all measures for gaining failed until regular rest periods were added.

It was found that rest before the noon and evening meal were most effective. This is not possible for all of you, but realize the necessity for adequate rest and fit it into your pattern.

An understanding doctor devised this plan for tired young mothers with new babies ... lie down and rest for ten full minutes out of every hour. This may seem inefficient and even lazy, but it works like a charm. Think of this respite as your time to build strength.

If you smoke, confine your smoking to the end of the meal so as to avoid dulling your appetite. If you are really in earnest about gaining, you will cut down on smoking and avoid excess coffee drinking.

Analyze the meal at which you tend to short change yourself on nutrition, and improve that meal. Get out more in the fresh air and you'll have an appetite. Since your food capacity is small, it is necessary for you to eat three meals a day, and add booster calories between meals. These should be of the sort that are easily and quickly digested.

IF YOU ARE underweight and out of shape, you need more exercise to restore tone to muscles. Remember, exercise normalizes and helps you to build where you need building. A daily walk is a tonic.

Stop fretting! Go at gaining with a joyous expectation of good things happening to you! William James said that human beings can alter their lives by changing the pattern of their thoughts. There is a healthier, happier way of life for you — claim it!

Seeks Rate Increase

CLEVELAND (AP)—The Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. says it will apply to the public utilities commission for a 20 per cent increase in its steam rates. A company spokesman Friday said the cost of running CEI's two steam plants had increased 12 per cent since the last raise in rates in 1954, while revenue from steam sales is down 18 per cent for that period. If approved, the increase would boost revenue $693,000 a year, he said.

2nd False Alarm From East End

For the second time in recent weeks, a false alarm was turned in from Box 19 at Mulberry and Locust Sts., firemen said.

However, this time the alarm interrupted the firemen's sleep as it was pulled at 1:07 a.m. today.

Chief Charles Bryan warned after the first false alarm that adults or youngsters apprehended turning in the phony fire reports will be prosecuted, and also will be responsible for any damage to fire equipment in answering a false call.

The North Side pumper's transmission was damaged while hurrying to Central Station to fill in on the first false alarm, Bryan declared, pointing out the repairs cost the city about $100.

Seeks Rate Increase

CLEVELAND (AP)—The Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. says it will apply to the public utilities commission for a 20 per cent increase in its steam rates. A company spokesman Friday said the cost of running CEI's two steam plants had increased 12 per cent since the last raise in rates in 1954, while revenue from steam sales is down 18 per cent for that period. If approved, the increase would boost revenue $693,000 a year, he said.

Airport Case Cited

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — The Cincinnati Gas & Electric Co. wants Charles Smith to either close down his airport or pay $18,000 to relocate nearby high-voltage lines. Smith said Friday, however, he told the company he doesn't plan to do either because he's invested about $40,000 in his airport along Ohio 48 south of Lebanon and doesn't have $18,000 to spare.

The President Addresses Moscow

A careful reading of President Kennedy's foreign policy speech before the American Society of Newspaper Editors reveals why many experts are saying it may herald a turning point in U.S.-Soviet Relations.

It contained a series of significant statements, each of them important in itself and all of them related to the others. They added up to a major appraisal of just what the world situation is.

In the face of disappointment at the failure of the first anti-Castro invasion of Cuba to dislodge the bearded dictator, the President made it clear that the United States does not believe the Cuban people have had their final say in the matter.

RELATING EVENTS in Cuba to regional conditions, President Kennedy re-emphasized that, like former President Eisenhower, he still considers the Monroe Doctrine to be the overriding policy on outside interference in the affairs of the Western Hemisphere.

While he hopes other Latin American nations agree with that doctrine in deeds as well as words, Washington's implementation of the doctrine by no means depends upon their performance. With or without their help, United States security will govern United States actions.

Relating hemispheric conditions to the world community, Mr. Kennedy declared that he is fully aware that events in Cuba or Laos are not isolated situations, but part of a continuing Communist warfare that includes subversion, inflitration and chaos—a war far more difficult to fight than the clash of armies and nuclear weapons.

Having thus tied local, regional and world threats together, the President paved the way for a far tougher line toward Moscow than he publicly has done before.

"We do not intend to be lectured on 'intervention' by those whose character was stamped for all time on the bloody streets of Budapest," he declared.

If the United States intervenes in Cuba, he said, this country will not "except or accept" the same outcome suffered by the small bands of invaders in the last few days.

HE PROMISED to re-examine and reorient our forces, our tactics and our institutions in order to influence the outcome of struggle that involves more than the fate of Laos or Cuba—a struggle that involves the survival of the free world.

It is interesting to relate the President's speech to the reaction from Moscow, whose mouthpiece radio said the "brink of war" policy was hazardous but it was "even more dangerous to pass the brink right into a world catastrophe."

President Kennedy's fundamental message may have been to serve notice on Moscow that the United States does not alone share the responsibility for creating brink-of-war situations which may lead to world catastrophe.

SUCH A CHARGE by the Russians is typical of Communist thinking—that if the United States does not sit idly by and let the great conspiracy take over Cuba or Laos, the United States is guilty of courting war.

We hope that by declaring the United States does not intend to sit idly by, the President was serving notice on Moscow that it should proceed cautiously, accepting its full share of the responsibility for courting war.

If that really is what he meant, Mr. Kennedy can count on the support of all the people for whom he speaks in foreign affairs.

Sounds Almost Old-Fashioned

If a consumer were to say it, he would be accused of knocking producers.

If a politician said it, he would be accused of leaning too far to the left.

If a labor leader said it, someone would say he was undermining management.

And if a management spokesman said it, he would have to explain to his associates that he was not advocating profit control.

But when the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, William C. McMartin Jr. says it, explaining that he is trying to solve the nation's economic problems, no one can accuse him of doing anything more sinister than stating an unorthodox opinion. And what did Mr. Martin say?

That this country needs to improve its productivity, then pass some of the gains to consumers in the form of reduced prices instead of hogging all of them for labor and management.

This sounds almost old-fashioned in 1961. Perhaps the delegates to the annual meeting of the Association of Reserve City Bankers of Boca Raton, Fla., thought the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board was being quaint.

But this once was regarded as an inspired idea.

Management and labor had combined their efforts to make U.S. productivity the envy of the world. As consumers responded by buying more U.S. goods, producers made it possible to reduce prices, thereby widening and deepening the market for U.S. goods. American-made gadgets and products were sold everywhere. And in America, itself, the highest standard of living in history was attained by following the rule that mass consumption was the other side of mass production; and that they went together like love and marriage, or a horse and carriage.

William McMartin, a pretty fair country expert on what the country needs, thinks it needs to get back to a winning combination, instead of looking for a pattern in which everything will go up, up, up and never come down.

To Shirk Or Not?

Springtime is election time for parent-teacher groups, booster organizations and other home-school organizations in the district.

Now comes the critical season for men and women called upon to serve as PTA president or band booster ways and means chairmen. Now comes the call to duty to spend a little more time on meetings or burn a few calories on raising money.

The easy way out is to decline the nomination or skip the meeting or use other subterfuges to be a true shirker.

At a recent meeting of one organization no one present would accept a nomination, and the session ended with a slate consisting of those members who were absent!

Fortunately, there are mature men and women, realizing their responsibility to their own youngsters, to their own school and to their own roles as fathers and mothers, who accept these jobs and who do them well for the most part.

Whose turn is it this year: Dad? Mom?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

A Jersey bank celebrated its birthday by throwing a picnic in the bank for depositors. Two thousand pounds of ham, beans, salads, etc., were dished out. Potted plants were given to women. Kiddies got balloons and other toys.

Friendly note in banking has come along fast. For years banks were austere, dripping with dignity and seemingly outposts of Aretic exploration.

A banker who smiled was distrusted by customers. His frigid manner was taken as proof of honesty and economic wisdom. Sidewhiskers helped.

But banks have warmed up all over. They are centers of jollity, affability and good fellowship.

"Hi, ya, pal" seems a greeting as proper for bank president as a formal card requesting a two-minute interview once was. The chairman of the board may be seen in high spirits arranging an indoor barbecue or costume ball for depositors.

You expect to have the treasurer, Hon. J. Tadwaller Fosterwiggan say "Call Me Smiley." But Jersey bank picnic hit new high in friendliness. The idea may be widely copied.

We look for the following bank sales pitches: "Make Your Deposit In The Bank With the Best Sandwiches and Coffee." "This Trust Company Counts Your Money, But Not Your Calories." "The Bank With The Best Menu In Town." "Get 3½ Per Cent Compound Interest and 100 Per Cent Good Luncheon Service." "You Bring Your Bank Book; We Bring the Refreshments." There is such a touch of show business sweeping over banks that we may hear of special family matinees.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN has seven kids. If there's ever any squawk from them that he isn't keeping them in shoes he can show them the delapidated footwear of his early pictures.

Sen. Kefauver is again after the drug industry. He thinks is should not be necessary for a man to visit finance company to get prescription filled.

New York now has state law keeping billboards far back from any interstate highway. This means autoists can see a waterfall, a brook or a breathtaking valley without giving equal time to all hotel, motel and beer signs.

Kaiser who built Hawaiian Village has sold it for $21.5 million and will build a new Hawaiian city there, calling it "Hawaii Kai."

Which reminds us of the time he ran a prize contest for best name for his auto and chose "Henry J."

Gov. Rockefeller has signed bill making attachments for belts compulsory on all new cars but not on trucks. Lawmakers probably figured truck drivers see that other cars get plenty of belts.

The U.N. session in the Cuban crisis, of top interest to all Americans, once again showed, through lack of TV and airwave coverage, that Uncle Sam not only fails to get the picture to the whole world, but to his own people. Only one TV station, thought dramatic, exciting and colorful presentation of attitudes affecting survival of the Free World worth bothering about, and it gave hours to the job. Other stations brushed off historic session with sketchy treatment on brief news programs.

Many an American, deeply concerned about Cuban-U.S. crisis, moaned as he observed that to almost all TV and radio stations, soap operas, panels, "Westerns" and plugs for assorted merchandise were of greater importance. (How cockeyed can the Voice of America, official or otherwise, get?)

"Saturn," only American rocket offering any hope of overtaking Soviet rockets fast, is being held up by strict observance of 40 hour week, it is charged in the Senate. Helping save civilization is okay, if it doesn't tie a man down too much.

The density of population average in the United States, according to the 1960 census, is 50.4 persons per square mile. In the 1950 census the average was 50.7 persons per square mile, the drop being due to the addition of Alaska whose density of population is only 0.4 persons per square mile.

Isaiah strengthens men today as he did 2700 years ago: "Hast thou not heard that the everlasting God . . . fainteth not, neither is weary . . . He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might he increaseth strength . . . they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles."

Labor Leader Lists Cuban Tyranny

By Victor Riesel

Not long after this columnist was hit, word came from Cuba that a young plantation labor leader had called together his council representing 790 sugar cane locals. He spoke. They passed a resolution of protest. They agreed with their chief that an injury to one is an injury to all—even if the injury is perpetrated by terrorists thousands of miles away.

Victor Riesel

Now, some years later, that labor leader is with me as I write. He is eager to talk swiftly, for he is just a few hours away from hitting the beach.

He is Carlos Rodriguez Quesada of Las Villas province, where the first wave of anti-Castro invaders moved in.

Senor Quesada, who had just "come out" in a tiny boat, spoke of the angry Cuban workers whose stomachs now were as empty as their hearts were filled with hatred for the Communist regime.

It was, he said, like Stalinist Russia. The right to strike was gone.

When the electrical workers called a work stoppage because their pay had been slashed and their taxes hiked, the firing squad arbitrated the dispute.

THREE LEADERS — William Lex Sante, Julio Casielles Amigo and Olirio Mendez Perez were shot down without trial. Another was sentenced to 30 years at hard labor.

The charge was "counter-revolutionary and terrorist activities." That's what a strike meant to Castro.

Others, said Quesada, did not need to strike. They were jobless—by the tens of thousands. The breweries had stopped because there was no cork for the bottle caps.

The tobacco factories had shut down because there was no paper or filter for cigarettes. The cigar plants were down because of the American boycott.

Four tire mills were closed for lack of rubber.

Thousands of salespeople were unemployed because their stores had been burned out and there were no construction material replacements.

Those industrial workers who had jobs could buy little. There was no butter. Most lard now was Russian lard from bears, not pigs. To buy even that meant buying a pound of Russian meat, bad meat. Cuban meat? There were five million head of cattle when Castro came out of the mountains. On April 15, there were only one million. Castro's "INRA"—the Agrarian Reform Office—had killed off the rest.

"I saw them slaughter, for food, half the prize breeding bulls," Quesada snapped, "some worth upward of $15,000 each."

Most workers were forced to contribute a day's work to a fund to build a statue of the pro-Communist Congolese.

"But I am a peasant man," Quesda said. "Let me tell you of the workers in the Las Villas unions.

"Our people have been paid $2.86 a day. Less that tax. But not in cash. We were paid in paper script for work in the state-owned sugar cane fields. We could only buy in the state-owned stores at enormous prices.

"We always were in debt. So we really were serfs tied to the soil. Our people slowed down, burned down cane and boycotted the work."

That's why critics of the regime were rounded up regularly and sentenced to one day's forced labor in the fields. That's why on March 29 the director of the national penal institutions were ordered to dispatch prison inmates to harvest the crops.

THAT'S WHY "Friends of the Cuban Revolution" groups in most Latin American countries were alerted to the recruiting of voluntary harvesting groups. On April 6, for example, a band of 25 Costa Rican peasants from the Heredia district were flown to Havana to work in Castro's fields.

They were flown out in the same plane which flew in with the Cuban baseball team. The voluntary cane cutters were rounded up by Antolin Morales Castro, president of the Santa Barbara de Heredia peasants union. This was to become a island-wide practice—to bring in cadres for harvesting and brainwashing.

My friend and I talked to all workers in all fields. The young men, the fishermen, the old men of the sea—who went hungry, their catch seized by the government.

When my friend Carlos Rodriguez Quesada left, he said, "Remember us, but tell the world to remember most the hundreds of students and workers who have been taken to the unknown Topes de Collantes concentration camp in the Escambray Mountains.

"There they have been killed without trial. Remember this prison is in the heart of America as America's freedom is in our hearts." I remember. "An injury to one is an injury to all."

Letter To The Editor

I read, with somewhat mixed emotions, your paper's news coverage of the Wellsville City Council meeting on Tuesday April 18.

I was pleased to read that Mr. Ralston had inspected the city jail and had found it to be sanitary, but disappointed that no action had been taken to protect the prisoners in case of fire, injury or illness. I believe that some sort of signaling device, such as a light suspended above the street or on a pole in front of the police station, could be used. This system is used quite effectively by the Chester and East Liverpool police departments to alert patrolmen.

Another alternative would be to employ a night turnkey. I was taken aback by Mr. Millers remark, apparently inferring that anyone who goes to jail is bad. Is it not possible that anyone at some time might break a minor traffic law, and not having the proper bond, be compelled to spend the night. I believe Mr. Hephner was misleading in his remark indicating that I had previously been in his jail. I never have, but almost was due to an incorrect assumption on their part. A few days later they discovered they were in error, but I never received any sort of comment or apology. This happened some time ago, and in all probability I did come in contact with the officers in question for a short period of time, but I did not recognize them from this short acquaintance at the time of my arrest, which was after dark.

Mr. Hephner also stated that all officers carry identification, but I must reiterate that Officer James did not have his credentials on his person and did not shew them to me before forcing me into his car. If he had, I would not have objected. He also stated that it is not necessary for an officer to be in uniform to make an arrest. This is true, but the officer must show his credentials prior to the arrest.

I had not intended to press this matter further publicly, but am obligated to do so when I feel that I am the target of inaccurate and misleading remarks. In closing I wish to thank you, and the person whose informative letter was sincerely appreciated.

NATO's Future

By Don Cook

Organization Faces Deepest Crisis To Date

PARIS

A succession of basic policy statements this month from heads of government of the United States, Great Britain, West Germany and France have now brought the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to the edge of the deepest political crisis in its 12-year history.

The survival of NATO is by no means yet at stake but its effectiveness and how it is to operate are becoming extremely serious issues at a time when new political, economic and military challenges are so obviously being mounted from the Communist world.

NATO, up until last Tuesday had not even been able to agree on a new Secretary General to replace Paul-Henri Spaak, who left office at the beginning of March. The French finally withdrew their objections to Dirk U. Stikker and the former Dutch foreign minister was named to the post. Mr. Stikker had been his country's representative on the Permanent Council.

Were the NATO problem only such relatively transient difficulties as the selection of a secretary general, the mood of the NATO permanent representatives in Paris would not be so bleak and discouraged.

IN FACT, the opposing public positions toward NATO which have been taken by President de Gaulle of France and President Kennedy add up to a basic cleavage among the Western powers, which may once again result in France being confronted with "the policy of the empty chair."

To put this clash in terms of the public statements of the two presidents in recent days, Mr. Kennedy said earlier this month:

"NATO is remarkable among the alliances of history in its combination of political, military, economic and even psychological components. What NATO is, at any time, depends not only upon its forces in being but upon the resolution of its leaders, the state of mind of its peoples, and the view of all these elements which is held by the Kremlin."

Meanwhile, President de Gaulle told a press conference:

"Everyone feels a change is needed . . . It is intolerable to a great nation that its destiny be left to the decisions and the actions of another nation, however friendly . . . The Continental European powers, who are much more vulnerable, must know exactly with what weapons and in what conditions their overseas allies will take part in the common battle . . . For NATO to endure in these conditions it must spread to new horizons and if it does not it will lose the basic and close solidarity of its members, which is indispensable."

ON THE ONE HAND the American President — backed up in successive statements from Prime Minister Macmillan of Great Britain and Chancellor Adenauer of West Germany — is seeking to confront the Soviet Union with a picture of an alliance which is growing in unity, common policies and idealism, and in sense of purpose and strength.

On the other hand, the president of France presents a picture of an alliance whose "Continental members" are divided against its non-Continental members and doubtful about their contribution to the common military effort and an alliance which no longer has its original usefulness in view of the fact that the world's biggest problems are no longer in Europe.

One of Gen. de Gaulle's strongest elements of character is consistency — and in the three years since he returned to power he has consistently moved further and further down the road of purely independent French policy where NATO is concerned.

As to where this may be taking both France and NATO, there are high qualified French government leaders who openly contemplate a "proliferation" of nuclear weapons in the world, and a break-up of NATO which would see Scandinavia depart and form a sort of non-nuclear neutralist alliance huddled on the northern flank of Europe.

GEN. DE GAULLE'S detailed objectives, meanwhile, are authoritatively reported to be a de-integration of NATO commands, at least so far as NATO corps and army groups are concerned.

This would leave Supreme Allied Headquarters intact, and would also leave the regional NATO headquarters for north, central and south — but they would not be commanding anything, only planning.

If this is Gen. de Gaulle's thinking, then the next big military issue which NATO faces with the French President is the question: "What will France do with its divisions when it brings them home from Algeria? Will it fulfill its commitments to the alliance, or will it insist that French forces revert to purely national command?"

Democrats Eye Political Harvest

WASHINGTON

If Castro fails, it won't be difficult to foresee the working of one paragraph in the 1964 Democratic platform. "Under the bold, resolute leadership of President Kennedy, the liberation of Cuba, etc., etc."

No one who knows the score doubts that the United States is helping the anti-Castro rebels, despite official denials or does any one doubt that Castro's fall would be a nice political harvest for Mr. Kennedy. The fact, however, is that the invasion began during the Eisenhower administration.

Within the administration, Secretary of Labor Arthur S. Goldberg is pressing for remedies for unemployment despite the hopeful signs of an upturn.

Mr. Goldberg's fear is that even with the return of better times, large pools of unemployment will remain.

He argues that these have to be dealt with specifically. They will not be cured, he says, by general economic improvement.

THE KENNEDY administration is in hot water politically with Italian-American groups because of the paucity of men and women of Italian descent appointed to federal jobs.

Indeed, a number of Italian-American newspapers around the country have been carrying letters recently from Lawrence F. O'Brien, one of the President's top political lieutenants, answering criticism and saying, in effect, "give us a chance." One example the administration points to in self-defense: Carmine Bellino, special consultant to the President and the budget director.

Reports that Southern textile manufacturers will go on "strike" against the fair employment practice of hiring Negroes has raised interesting implications for Washington.

The Southern mills fear that if they hire Negroes their white workers will walk out. But if they discriminate against Negroes, this will bring the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity down on them because of their contracts with the government for cloth for military uniforms and other things.

The man who would have to force the crackdown would be Vice President Johnson, a Texan, who heads the committee.

What NATO is, at any time, depends not only upon its forces in being but upon the resolution of its leaders, the state of mind of its peoples, and the view of all these elements which is held by the Kremlin."

Meanwhile, President de Gaulle told a press conference:

"Everyone feels a change is needed . . . It is intolerable to a great nation that its destiny be left to the decisions and the actions of another nation, however friendly . . . The Continental European powers, who are much more vulnerable, must know exactly with what weapons and in what conditions their overseas allies will take part in the common battle . . . For NATO to endure in these conditions it must spread to new horizons and if it does not it will lose the basic and close solidarity of its members, which is indispensable."

ON THE ONE HAND the American President — backed up in successive statements from Prime Minister Macmillan of Great Britain and Chancellor Adenauer of West Germany — is seeking to confront the Soviet Union with a picture of an alliance which is growing in unity, common policies and idealism, and in sense of purpose and strength.

On the other hand, the president of France presents a picture of an alliance whose "Continental members" are divided against its non-Continental members and doubtful about their contribution to the common military effort and an alliance which no longer has its original usefulness in view of the fact that the world's biggest problems are no longer in Europe.

One of Gen. de Gaulle's strongest elements of character is consistency — and in the three years since he returned to power he has consistently moved further and further down the road of purely independent French policy where NATO is concerned.

As to where this may be taking both France and NATO, there are high qualified French government leaders who openly contemplate a "proliferation" of nuclear weapons in the world, and a break-up of NATO which would see Scandinavia depart and form a sort of non-nuclear neutralist alliance huddled on the northern flank of Europe.

GEN. DE GAULLE'S detailed objectives, meanwhile, are authoritatively reported to be a de-integration of NATO commands, at least so far as NATO corps and army groups are concerned.

This would leave Supreme Allied Headquarters intact, and would also leave the regional NATO headquarters for north, central and south — but they would not be commanding anything, only planning.

If this is Gen. de Gaulle's thinking, then the next big military issue which NATO faces with the French President is the question: "What will France do with its divisions when it brings them home from Algeria? Will it fulfill its commitments to the alliance, or will it insist that French forces revert to purely national command?"

Sounds Almost Old-Fashioned

If a consumer were to say it, he would be accused of knocking producers.

If a politician said it, he would be accused of leaning too far to the left.

If a labor leader said it, someone would say he was undermining management.

And if a management spokesman said it, he would have to explain to his associates that he was not advocating profit control.

But when the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, William C. McMartin Jr. says it, explaining that he is trying to solve the nation's economic problems, no one can accuse him of doing anything more sinister than stating an unorthodox opinion. And what did Mr. Martin say?

That this country needs to improve its productivity, then pass some of the gains to consumers in the form of reduced prices instead of hogging all of them for labor and management.

This sounds almost old-fashioned in 1961. Perhaps the delegates to the annual meeting of the Association of Reserve City Bankers of Boca Raton, Fla., thought the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board was being quaint.

But this once was regarded as an inspired idea.

Management and labor had combined their efforts to make U.S. productivity the envy of the world. As consumers responded by buying more U.S. goods, producers made it possible to reduce prices, thereby widening and deepening the market for U.S. goods. American-made gadgets and products were sold everywhere. And in America, itself, the highest standard of living in history was attained by following the rule that mass consumption was the other side of mass production; and that they went together like love and marriage, or a horse and carriage.

William McMartin, a pretty fair country expert on what the country needs, thinks it needs to get back to a winning combination, instead of looking for a pattern in which everything will go up, up, up and never come down.

To Shirk Or Not?

Springtime is election time for parent-teacher groups, booster organizations and other home-school organizations in the district.

Now comes the critical season for men and women called upon to serve as PTA president or band booster ways and means chairmen. Now comes the call to duty to spend a little more time on meetings or burn a few calories on raising money.

The easy way out is to decline the nomination or skip the meeting or use other subterfuges to be a true shirker.

At a recent meeting of one organization no one present would accept a nomination, and the session ended with a slate consisting of those members who were absent!

Fortunately, there are mature men and women, realizing their responsibility to their own youngsters, to their own school and to their own roles as fathers and mothers, who accept these jobs and who do them well for the most part.

Whose turn is it this year: Dad? Mom?

By Victor Riesel

Not long after this columnist was hit, word came from Cuba that a young plantation labor leader had called together his council representing 790 sugar cane locals. He spoke. They passed a resolution of protest. They agreed with their chief that an injury to one is an injury to all—even if the injury is perpetrated by terrorists thousands of miles away.

Victor Riesel

Now, some years later, that labor leader is with me as I write. He is eager to talk swiftly, for he is just a few hours away from hitting the beach.

He is Carlos Rodriguez Quesada of Las Villas province, where the first wave of anti-Castro invaders moved in.

Senor Quesada, who had just "come out" in a tiny boat, spoke of the angry Cuban workers whose stomachs now were as empty as their hearts were filled with hatred for the Communist regime.

It was, he said, like Stalinist Russia. The right to strike was gone.

When the electrical workers called a work stoppage because their pay had been slashed and their taxes hiked, the firing squad arbitrated the dispute.

THREE LEADERS — William Lex Sante, Julio Casielles Amigo and Olirio Mendez Perez were shot down without trial. Another was sentenced to 30 years at hard labor.

The charge was "counter-revolutionary and terrorist activities." That's what a strike meant to Castro.

Others, said Quesada, did not need to strike. They were jobless—by the tens of thousands. The breweries had stopped because there was no cork for the bottle caps.

The tobacco factories had shut down because there was no paper or filter for cigarettes. The cigar plants were down because of the American boycott.

Four tire mills were closed for lack of rubber.

Thousands of salespeople were unemployed because their stores had been burned out and there were no construction material replacements.

Those industrial workers who had jobs could buy little. There was no butter. Most lard now was Russian lard from bears, not pigs. To buy even that meant buying a pound of Russian meat, bad meat. Cuban meat? There were five million head of cattle when Castro came out of the mountains. On April 15, there were only one million. Castro's "INRA"—the Agrarian Reform Office—had killed off the rest.

"I saw them slaughter, for food, half the prize breeding bulls," Quesada snapped, "some worth upward of $15,000 each."

Most workers were forced to contribute a day's work to a fund to build a statue of the pro-Communist Congolese.

"But I am a peasant man," Quesda said. "Let me tell you of the workers in the Las Villas unions.

"Our people have been paid $2.86 a day. Less that tax. But not in cash. We were paid in paper script for work in the state-owned sugar cane fields. We could only buy in the state-owned stores at enormous prices.

"We always were in debt. So we really were serfs tied to the soil. Our people slowed down, burned down cane and boycotted the work."

That's why critics of the regime were rounded up regularly and sentenced to one day's forced labor in the fields. That's why on March 29 the director of the national penal institutions were ordered to dispatch prison inmates to harvest the crops.

THAT'S WHY "Friends of the Cuban Revolution" groups in most Latin American countries were alerted to the recruiting of voluntary harvesting groups. On April 6, for example, a band of 25 Costa Rican peasants from the Heredia district were flown to Havana to work in Castro's fields.

They were flown out in the same plane which flew in with the Cuban baseball team. The voluntary cane cutters were rounded up by Antolin Morales Castro, president of the Santa Barbara de Heredia peasants union. This was to become a island-wide practice—to bring in cadres for harvesting and brainwashing.

My friend and I talked to all workers in all fields. The young men, the fishermen, the old men of the sea—who went hungry, their catch seized by the government.

When my friend Carlos Rodriguez Quesada left, he said, "Remember us, but tell the world to remember most the hundreds of students and workers who have been taken to the unknown Topes de Collantes concentration camp in the Escambray Mountains.

"There they have been killed without trial. Remember this prison is in the heart of America as America's freedom is in our hearts." I remember. "An injury to one is an injury to all."

Democrats Eye Political Harvest

WASHINGTON

If Castro fails, it won't be difficult to foresee the working of one paragraph in the 1964 Democratic platform. "Under the bold, resolute leadership of President Kennedy, the liberation of Cuba, etc., etc."

No one who knows the score doubts that the United States is helping the anti-Castro rebels, despite official denials or does any one doubt that Castro's fall would be a nice political harvest for Mr. Kennedy. The fact, however, is that the invasion began during the Eisenhower administration.

Within the administration, Secretary of Labor Arthur S. Goldberg is pressing for remedies for unemployment despite the hopeful signs of an upturn.

Mr. Goldberg's fear is that even with the return of better times, large pools of unemployment will remain.

He argues that these have to be dealt with specifically. They will not be cured, he says, by general economic improvement.

THE KENNEDY administration is in hot water politically with Italian-American groups because of the paucity of men and women of Italian descent appointed to federal jobs.

Indeed, a number of Italian-American newspapers around the country have been carrying letters recently from Lawrence F. O'Brien, one of the President's top political lieutenants, answering criticism and saying, in effect, "give us a chance." One example the administration points to in self-defense: Carmine Bellino, special consultant to the President and the budget director.

Reports that Southern textile manufacturers will go on "strike" against the fair employment practice of hiring Negroes has raised interesting implications for Washington.

The Southern mills fear that if they hire Negroes their white workers will walk out. But if they discriminate against Negroes, this will bring the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity down on them because of their contracts with the government for cloth for military uniforms and other things.

The man who would have to force the crackdown would be Vice President Johnson, a Texan, who heads the committee.

The Once Over

A Jersey bank celebrated its birthday by throwing a picnic in the bank for depositors. Two thousand pounds of ham, beans, salads, etc., were dished out. Potted plants were given to women. Kiddies got balloons and other toys.

Friendly note in banking has come along fast. For years banks were austere, dripping with dignity and seemingly outposts of Aretic exploration.

A banker who smiled was distrusted by customers. His frigid manner was taken as proof of honesty and economic wisdom. Sidewhiskers helped.

But banks have warmed up all over. They are centers of jollity, affability and good fellowship.

"Hi, ya, pal" seems a greeting as proper for bank president as a formal card requesting a two-minute interview once was. The chairman of the board may be seen in high spirits arranging an indoor barbecue or costume ball for depositors.

You expect to have the treasurer, Hon. J. Tadwaller Fosterwiggan say "Call Me Smiley." But Jersey bank picnic hit new high in friendliness. The idea may be widely copied.

We look for the following bank sales pitches: "Make Your Deposit In The Bank With the Best Sandwiches and Coffee." "This Trust Company Counts Your Money, But Not Your Calories," "The Bank With The Best Menu In Town," "Get 3½ Per Cent Compound Interest and 100 Per Cent Good Luncheon Service," "You Bring Your Bank Book; We Bring the Refreshments." There is such a touch of show business sweeping over banks that we may hear of special family matinees.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN has seven kids. If there's ever any squawk from them that he isn't keeping them in shoes he can show them the delapidated footwear of his early pictures.

Sen. Kefauver is again after the drug industry. He thinks is should not be necessary for a man to visit finance company to get prescription filled.

New York now has state law keeping billboards far back from any interstate highway. This means autoists can see a waterfall, a brook or a breathtaking valley without giving equal time to all hotel, motel and beer signs.

Kaiser who built Hawaiian Village has sold it for $21.5 million and will build a new Hawaiian city there, calling it "Hawaii Kai."

Which reminds us of the time he ran a prize contest for best name for his auto and chose "Henry J."

Gov. Rockefeller has signed bill making attachments for belts compulsory on all new cars but not on trucks. Lawmakers probably figured truck drivers see that other cars get plenty of belts.

The U.N. session in the Cuban crisis, of top interest to all Americans, once again showed, through lack of TV and airwave coverage, that Uncle Sam not only fails to get the picture to the whole world, but to his own people. Only one TV station, thought dramatic, exciting and colorful presentation of attitudes affecting survival of the Free World worth bothering about, and it gave hours to the job. Other stations brushed off historic session with sketchy treatment on brief news programs.

Many an American, deeply concerned about Cuban-U.S. crisis, moaned as he observed that to almost all TV and radio stations, soap operas, panels, "Westerns" and plugs for assorted merchandise were of greater importance. (How cockeyed can the Voice of America, official or otherwise, get?)

"Saturn," only American rocket offering any hope of overtaking Soviet rockets fast, is being held up by strict observance of 40 hour week; it is charged in the Senate. Helping save civilization is okay, if it doesn't tie a man down too much.

The density of population average in the United States, according to the 1960 census, is 50.4 persons per square mile. In the 1950 census the average was 50.7 persons per square mile, the drop being due to the addition of Alaska whose density of population is only 0.4 persons per square mile.

Letter To The Editor

I read, with somewhat mixed emotions, your paper's news coverage of the Wellsville City Council meeting on Tuesday April 18.

I was pleased to read that Mr. Ralston had inspected the city jail and had found it to be sanitary, but disappointed that no action had been taken to protect the prisoners in case of fire, injury or illness. I believe that some sort of signaling device, such as a light suspended above the street or on a pole in front of the police station, could be used. This system is used quite effectively by the Chester and East Liverpool police departments to alert patrolmen.

Another alternative would be to employ a night turnkey. I was taken aback by Mr. Millers remark, apparently inferring that anyone who goes to jail is bad. Is it not possible that anyone at some time might break a minor traffic law, and not having the proper bond, be compelled to spend the night. I believe Mr. Hephner was misleading in his remark indicating that I had previously been in his jail. I never have, but almost was due to an incorrect assumption on their part. A few days later they discovered they were in error, but I never received any sort of comment or apology. This happened some time ago, and in all probability I did come in contact with the officers in question for a short period of time, but I did not recognize them from this short acquaintance at the time of my arrest, which was after dark.

Mr. Hephner also stated that all officers carry identification, but I must reiterate that Officer James did not have his credentials on his person and did not show them to me before forcing me into his car. If he had, I would not have objected. He also stated that it is not necessary for an officer to be in uniform to make an arrest. This is true, but the officer must show his credentials prior to the arrest.

I had not intended to press this matter further publicly, but am obligated to do so when I feel that I am the target of inaccurate and misleading remarks. In closing I wish to thank you, and the person whose informative letter was sincerely appreciated.

UC's Warned On Paint In Railway Car

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Ohio's utilities commission has been warned that it may hear from some commuters who discovered, apparently the hard way, that paint had not dried inside a remodelled railroad car.

James L. Fullin, assistant secretary of the commission, said he got this account of a good deed gone sour during a telephone conversation with the assistant general solicitor of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Donald Brinkworth:

The railroad remodeled a coach to use on the run which brings Ravenna-Alliance area commuters to Cleveland when the train coming west from Pittsburgh is a half-hour or more late.

For some reason, the paint inside did not dry, and the coach was put into use before anyone noticed. But the commuters apparently did, and Fullin said Brinkworth indicated the possibility that some may complain to the commission. Fullin said no complaints have come in yet.

The assistant secretary said that particular run has been the subject of commuter complaints before. When users complained about the equipment used on standby service when the westbound train from Pittsburgh was late, the commission in January asked the railroad to correct the situation.

The railroad said later that it had done so, Fullin added.

Confident Living

By Norman Vincent Peale

When Is A Man Through?

One of America's most popular preachers is an institution in himself. There is never an empty seat at his services, come rain or shine. People come in busloads from distant places. He has a homey, friendly style and it's no wonder people love him. He has never allowed himself to get dragged into issues, like some people I know. He has stuck to preaching the gospel and loving and helping people. The huge church he heads at the heart of his city is largely of his making; so I was astonished recently when he said, "They're going to retire me this year. I'll be 72 in June."

DR. PEALE

"But you are the picture of health, have a mind popping with ideas, and prodigious energy. Who can be so stupid as to retire you? One thing is sure, if they retire you, they will 'retire' that church!"

"Well, there is a mechanism in the retirement system of my denomination that could let me remain on the job if the powers that be will exercise it."

I SURE hope that 'ecclesiastical authority' will see the immense value in maintaining this great man at the heart of the vast metropolis where he is beloved by people of all faiths—as well as those of no faith.

It is a positive shame how suddenly, because of arbitrary age rules, men at the height of their powers and doing terrific jobs are cut off, dropped out, cast aside.

Then what often happens? The retirement dinner is over, the wrist watch presented, the citation read, the pension activated. The poor fellow fishes for a while, but soon tires of that. He golfs until he is fed up. He moons around the house. The sense of imposed uselessness grows on him and finally he just goes to seed; presently you pick up the paper one day and there is his obituary.

Of what did he die? Well, if the truth were told, death was due to boredom, ennui and a sense of uselessness. The personality can hardly survive such a traumatic experience, the deep wound of not being needed, of being useless, when all the time that individual has useful potential.

OF COURSE, it is ture that some men age faster than others and should indeed be retired at 65. In fact, some might well have been retired at 40 — at which age they stopped growing mentally.

They were through almost before they started, like a school teacher I heard of: At a boys' school a new headmaster was chosen from among members of the faculty. After the appointment was announced, a teacher approached the chairman of the selection committee with a gnawing question.

"I accept the fact that I wasn't picked for the headmastership," he said forthrightly, "but can you tell me why I wasn't at least considered for the post? It seems curious. After all, I've had 20 years' teaching experience here."

"That's not quite the way we looked at it," came the reply. "In your case, the board felt that what you've had is one year's experience repeated 20 times."

But when a man is still growing, still healthy and still effective there certainly ought to be sufficient flexibility in retirement systems to keep him on.

To retire every man simply because he reaches a chronological point is positively stupid and causes us to be deprived unnecessarily of some of our most competent people, men who are greatly needed. A system of standards could be added to retirement policies and men who can clearly meet them should be continued in the vital contribution they are making.

MOREOVER, something should be done to conserve the usefulness of men who are retiring each year.

I have been thinking of trying to organize a Re-adjustment and Re-activation Club that would seek to place competent retired men in various service activities. They could work as much or as little as they might wish. But scope would be given for their active minds and vast experience and abilities to be utilized in important ways.

My friend Whit Smith is a shining example: Whit was formerly vice president of the American Railway Express and had some 70,000 people under his direction.

When compulsory retirement time came he was still going strong so he looked around for some challenging activity. He made careful study of several organizations and finally accepted an unsalaried job as vice president and business manager of The American Foundation for Religion and Psychiatry, an interfaith, scientific, counseling service.

Is Whit Smith retired? Hardly. He works from 9 to 4, five days a week, directs a staff of 65, and raises a budget of upwards of half a million dollars a year. He has made a wonderful contribution in strengthening the organization in all ways and he syas he is having even more fun and satisfaction than in his "first" career.

America is missing a trick in not doing a better job in using the talents and energies of her older men.

Judge Clears Path For Financial Probe

CINCINNATI (AP)—Judge John Druffel of U.S. District Court has opened the way for a Hamilton County probe of the financial activities of attorney Leslie D. Stickler.

The judge Friday continued indefinitely a federal charge against stickler of Fraud by wire.

The judge said a report by the Ohio Division of Securities indicated a key witness in the case, Richard Brower of Cincinnati, gave testimony so inconsistent that it "destroys his credibility as a witness."

The federal charge contended Stickler telephoned Brower in Florida to borrow $6,000 as part of a fraudulent loan operation.

Federal attorneys, after study of Stickler's records, said he was apparently the center of a loan operation involving up to $3 million.

Stage $1,640 Holdup

CINCINNATI (AP)—Two masked men have staged a $1,640 robbery of Union Savings and Loan Association in western Cincinnati, and it was similar to a holdup two weeks ago, police said. The men took the money at gunpoint Friday and herded two employees into a back room before fleeing. Investigators said descriptions of the men tied in with two men who got away with $500 April 7 from Orpheum Federal Savings & Loan Association.

UC's Warned On Paint In Railway Car

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Ohio's utilities commission has been warned that it may hear from some commuters who discovered, apparently the hard way, that paint had not dried inside a remodelled railroad car.

James L. Fullin, assistant secretary of the commission, said he got this account of a good deed gone sour during a telephone conversation with the assistant general solicitor of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Donald Brinkworth:

The railroad remodeled a coach to use on the run which brings Ravenna-Alliance area commuters to Cleveland when the train coming west from Pittsburgh is a half-hour or more late.

For some reason, the paint inside did not dry, and the coach was put into use before anyone noticed. But the commuters apparently did, and Fullin said Brinkworth indicated the possibility that some may complain to the commission. Fullin said no complaints have come in yet.

The assistant secretary said that particular run has been the subject of commuter complaints before. When users complained about the equipment used on standby service when the westbound train from Pittsburgh was late, the commission in January asked the railroad to correct the situation.

The railroad said later that it had done so, Fullin added.

Confident Living

By Norman Vincent Peale

When Is A Man Through?

One of America's most popular preachers is an institution in himself. There is never an empty seat at his services, come rain or shine. People come in busloads from distant places. He has a homey, friendly style and it's no wonder people love him. He has never allowed himself to get dragged into issues, like some people I know. He has stuck to preaching the gospel and loving and helping people. The huge church he heads at the heart of his city is largely of his making; so I was astonished recently when he said, "They're going to retire me this year. I'll be 72 in June."

DR. PEALE

"But you are the picture of health, have a mind popping with ideas, and prodigious energy. Who can be so stupid as to retire you? One thing is sure, if they retire you, they will 'retire' that church!"

"Well, there is a mechanism in the retirement system of my denomination that could let me remain on the job if the powers that be will exercise it."

I SURE hope that 'ecclesiastical authority' will see the immense value in maintaining this great man at the heart of the vast metropolis where he is beloved by people of all faiths—as well as those of no faith.

It is a positive shame how suddenly, because of arbitrary age rules, men at the height of their powers and doing terrific jobs are cut off, dropped out, cast aside.

Then what often happens? The retirement dinner is over, the wrist watch presented, the citation read, the pension activated. The poor fellow fishes for a while, but soon tires of that. He golfs until he is fed up. He moons around the house. The sense of imposed uselessness grows on him and finally he just goes to seed; presently you pick up the paper one day and there is his obituary.

Of what did he die? Well, if the truth were told, death was due to boredom, ennui and a sense of uselessness. The personality can hardly survive such a traumatic experience, the deep wound of not being needed, of being useless, when all the time that individual has useful potential.

OF COURSE, it is ture that some men age faster than others and should indeed be retired at 65. In fact, some might well have been retired at 40 — at which age they stopped growing mentally.

They were through almost before they started, like a school teacher I heard of: At a boys' school a new headmaster was chosen from among members of the faculty. After the appointment was announced, a teacher approached the chairman of the selection committee with a gnawing question.

"I accept the fact that I wasn't picked for the headmastership," he said forthrightly, "but can you tell me why I wasn't at least considered for the post? It seems curious. After all, I've had 20 years' teaching experience here."

"That's not quite the way we looked at it," came the reply. "In your case, the board felt that what you've had is one year's experience repeated 20 times."

But when a man is still growing, still healthy and still effective there certainly ought to be sufficient flexibility in retirement systems to keep him on.

To retire every man simply because he reaches a chronological point is positively stupid and causes us to be deprived unnecessarily of some of our most competent people, men who are greatly needed. A system of standards could be added to retirement policies and men who can clearly meet them should be continued in the vital contribution they are making.

MOREOVER, something should be done to conserve the usefulness of men who are retiring each year.

I have been thinking of trying to organize a Re-adjustment and Re-activation Club that would seek to place competent retired men in various service activities. They could work as much or as little as they might wish. But scope would be given for their active minds and vast experience and abilities to be utilized in important ways.

My friend Whit Smith is a shining example: Whit was formerly vice president of the American Railway Express and had some 70,000 people under his direction. When compulsory retirement time came he was still going strong so he looked around for some challenging activity. He made careful study of several organizations and finally accepted an unsalaried job as vice president and business manager of The American Foundation for Religion and Psychiatry, an interfaith, scientific, counseling service.

Is Whit Smith retired? Hardly. He works from 9 to 4, five days a week, directs a staff of 65, and raises a budget of upwards of half a million dollars a year. He has made a wonderful contribution in strengthening the organization in all ways and he syas he is having even more fun and satisfaction than in his "first" career.

America is missing a trick in not doing a better job in using the talents and energies of her older men.

Judge Clears Path For Financial Probe

CINCINNATI (AP)—Judge John Druffel of U.S. District Court has opened the way for a Hamilton County probe of the financial activities of attorney Leslie D. Stickler.

The judge Friday continued indefinitely a federal charge against stickler of Fraud by wire.

The judge said a report by the Ohio Division of Securities indicated a key witness in the case, Richard Brower of Cincinnati, gave testimony so inconsistent that it "destroys his credibility as a witness."

The federal charge contended Stickler telephoned Brower in Florida to borrow $6,000 as part of a fraudulent loan operation.

Federal attorneys, after study of Stickler's records, said he was apparently the center of a loan operation involving up to $3 million.

Banquet To Be Friday

City CBMC Will Hear International Leader

Waldo Yeager of Toledo, chairman of the Christian Business Men's Committee International, will be speaker at the annual spring men's banquet of the East Liverpool CBMC Friday at 6:30 p. m. at the Travelers Hotel.

Yeager addressed the city group at its first banquet shortly after it was organized.

One of Yeager's first decisions after he became sole owner of the firm was that he would tithe profits from the company as well as any money he received personally from its operation. Since 1941, the business has grown more than 500 per cent, sponsors here said.

The Cortland company now is one of the largest independently-owned distributors of government-inspected and graded eggs and table - ready poultry in Ohio. A branch plant is located at Ashley, Ind., for handling more than 10 million pounds of poultry and eggs from farmers.

One of several innovations begun by Yeager in the plant was a devotional period at 12:15 p. m. every Tuesday which employes may attend on the company time.

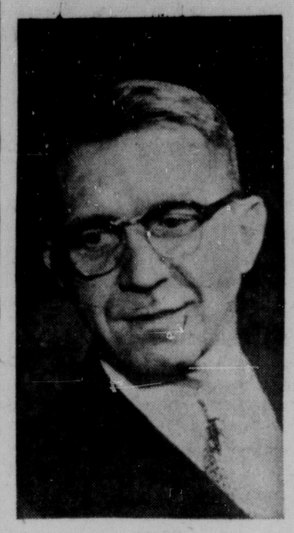

He now devotes much of his time to Christian work, his primary interest being the stimulation and activation of the Christian Business Men's Committee movement.

In addition to his many responsibilities with CBMC, Yeager is a member of the Board of the Detroit Bible Institute and the World of Life Hour. He is also active in his own church work and is called on frequently for testimonies and messages at jails, hospitals and many other places.

More than 450 committees are now active in 30 countries.

Tickets may be obtained from any member or by calling Don Smith at FU. 5-1215. Roland Edgar is chairman of the banquet.

The committee sponsors the city's Bible Clubs held from September through May.

Banquet To Be Friday

City CBMC Will Hear International Leader

Waldo Yeager of Toledo, chairman of the Christian Business Men's Committee International, will be speaker at the annual spring men's banquet of the East Liverpool CBMC Friday at 6:30 p. m. at the Travelers Hotel.

Yeager addressed the city group at its first banquet shortly after it was organized.

One of Yeager's first decisions after he became sole owner of the firm was that he would tithe profits from the company as well as any money he received personally from its operation. Since 1941, the business has grown more than 500 per cent, sponsors here said.

The Cortland company now is one of the largest independently-owned distributors of government-inspected and graded eggs and table - ready poultry in Ohio. A branch plant is located at Ashley, Ind., for handling more than 10 million pounds of poultry and eggs from farmers.

One of several innovations begun by Yeager in the plant was a devotional period at 12:15 p. m. every Tuesday which employes may attend on the company time.

He now devotes much of his time to Christian work, his primary interest being the stimulation and activation of the Christian Business Men's Committee movement.

In addition to his many responsibilities with CBMC, Yeager is a member of the Board of the Detroit Bible Institute and the World of Life Hour. He is also active in his own church work and is called on frequently for testimonies and messages at jails, hospitals and many other places.

More than 450 committees are now active in 30 countries.

Tickets may be obtained from any member or by calling Don Smith at FU. 5-1215. Roland Edgar is chairman of the banquet.

The committee sponsors the city's Bible Clubs held from September through May.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Day	Book	Chapter	Verses
Sunday	I Corinthians	12	12-21
Monday	Exodus	4	1-5
Tuesday	Matthew	6	1-4
Wednesday	Psalms	24	1-6
Thursday	II Corinthians	12	14-15
Friday	Genesis	49	48-49
Saturday	Matthew	28	18-20

When someone says, "It's for you," our minds begin to buzz with questions. Who is it? What do they want? Good News? Bad News? Work? Pleasure?

It's for you! Commanding words that summon our immediate attention. And those words apply as well to the Church as they do to a telephone call.

The Church is for you! Its services of worship, its program of religious education, its comforting ministration in time of spiritual crisis . . . all for you!

And the Church has a vital message—good news for a discouraged world. It has a glorious work before it—a happy fellowship for men, women, and children of noble purpose.

The Church deserves your support. It's for you!

Legislator Discusses Delays In Enactment At Lions Club

The problems of getting legislation enacted into law were related by State Rep. Warren Bettis at the meeting of the Lions Club Friday noon at the Travelers Hotel .

"There are some 62 ways legislation can be killed before it ever gets to the governor's desk for approval or veto," Bettis said.

After the legislation is placed in the hopper, it goes to the House reference committee, which can delay it while it determines what committee should hold a hearing.

The "work camp" legislation suggested by Juvenile Judge Louis Tobin for the establishment of work camps for juvenile offenders now is before the reference committee.

It then is referred to the proper committee, which hears testimony. If a controversy develops, it may be referred to a sub-committee for action before the entire committee reaches a decision, he explained.

If the bill still is alive, it goes to the rules committee where it can be tied up for an entire term if it is not satisfactory to party leaders, Bettis said.

If it finally gets on the floor of the House and is approved, then the sponsor must go through the whole procedure again with the Senate, the speaker continued.

Bettis predicted a bill he introduced providing for the establishment of community colleges will face rough going. "If community colleges are not approved this term, the legislation is certain to be introduced again in the next session."

Bettis said he understands Sen. Ross Pepple, chairman of the Senate education committee, is opposed to community colleges and plans to introduce his own legislation.

Bettis said he introduced the bill, which provides for control by local trustees reporting to the State Board of Education, because it would aid students in overcoming difficulties in their first year and make it less expensive for prospective students to receive two years' credit.

The legislator also said he is opposing a bill which would allow the State Department of Liquor Control to sell liquor through gift certificates.

"I don't believe that's the purpose of the liquor department," Bettis said, explaining he knows through his work in Juvenile Court and as an assistant prosecutor the number of calls complaining about the sale of liquor to minors.

Bettis said he also is opposing the proposed consolidation of the Soldiers and Sailors Relief Commission with the Welfare Department.

"There is a tendency in the state government to consolidate activities. We have too much government and too much shifting of responsibility. I don't believe in a centralized government."

Rep. Bettis was introduced by Ernie Lowe, program chairman. Howard E. Tice, president, presided.

Cuba

Miro Torres bit his lip and rocked in his chair as he admitted that his force was defeated and his operation ended in failure.

The rebel leader's son said on Havana television that he had been well treated since his capture. All his comments were in the form of answers to his interrogators.

"Then it is not just to say that Cuban militiamen behave like human beasts?" Miro Tores was asked.

"Absolutely not," he replied before the cameras.

When asked by the panel of interviewers what he and his men expected to find when they landed, Miro Torres said:

"We thought the militia and the army would join us."

"That is what you were told. But what did you find?"

"They fought us very hard and defeated us."

"Then you were defeated?" Miro Torres was asked.

"Yes," he answered.

Miro Torres also responded "no" when asked if any appreciable number of invaders had escaped.

Jose Miro Cardona appealed from his New York headquarters to Pope John XXIII, asking the pontiff's intercession to halt firing squad executions of captured rebels. A Havana dispatch Friday said the number shot had reached 29 in three days.

Miro Cardona said in his cable to the Vatican that the Pope's voice, "exemplifying Christian charity, could save the lives of many idealistic men" by interceding through the International Red Cross. Miro Cardona also messaged the presidents of 11 Latin American nations, asking them to "act promptly" to prevent more executions.

President Kennedy was to meet today with former President Eisenhower at Camp David, Md., to discuss at lunch the recent events in Cuba. The two have not met since Kennedy took office.

AP Correspondent Bem Price reported from Cuba that an underground source there complained bitterly over what he saw as the reasons for the failure of last weekend's invasion attempt. The source said the rebels neglected to seize radio stations for rallying the masses and did not furnish themselves with proper aerial support.

The U.N. General Assembly adopted 59-13 a mild resolution asking all nations to take whatever peaceful steps they can to remove existing tension between the United States and Cuba.

The assembly killed a provision to assign a peacemaker role to Latin American nations, reversing the U.N. Political Committee.

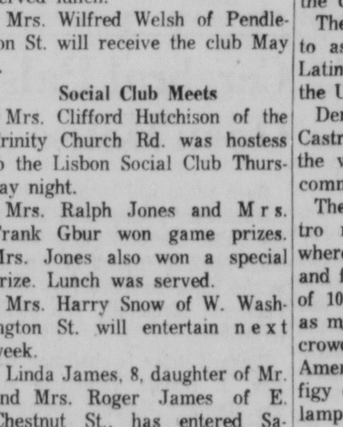

Demonstrations for and against Castro continued in the rest of the world. Some Asian editorial comment backed Washington.

The latest and biggest pro-Castro rally was in Mexico City, where police used clubs, tear gas and fire hoses to disperse a mob of 10,000. Injuries were reported as minor. Police moved in as the crowd was about to burn an American flag and a 10-foot effigy of Kennedy hanging from a lamp post.

Junior Women's Club Sets Chester Cancer Campaign

The Chester Junior Women's Club will begin its annual door-to-door canvass for the Cancer Fund Monday.

Mrs. Wilbert Sayers, member of the Board of Directors of the Hancock-Brooke County Cancer Society, said "This year, as in the past, the volunteers will be asking for your donations to further the national program which is again a three-fold project — research, education and service."

Each canvasser will have literature listing the "Seven Danger Signals" of cancer. Films are available anytime to clubs and civic organizations, not just during the month of April, she said.

Speakers and films may also be arranged for meetings by contacting the Cancer Center in Weirton, or through members of the club.

"The service program in Hancock County is without equal in the state," Mrs. Sayers declared. "Not only are arrangements made to transport patients to various hospitals but also a very complete loan closet is maintained in Weirton to supply at-home patients."

Six patients in the Chester area alone were supplied with beds, dressings, gowns and drugs in the past year, as part of a year-around project.

Mrs. Sayers stressed that donors should read the literature to possibly save their own lives. She is the Chester loan closet chairman for the cancer unit.

Editor:

It appears Bro. Guadagno in his letter to the Herald resents my campaigning for office, in the Brotherhood. Despite the fact that he strives for office.

My letter to the trade made no personal reference to the constitution committee, who as we all know were an appointed committee, but rather dealt with the way they manhandled the old Constitution, pointing out various rights and privileges the membership had been deprived of.

It was critical of their work, and certainly as Americans we all have this privilege. It made reference to certain practices of the Executive Board.

As to the new Constitution being, "The most Democratic" perhaps the recent secretary of this committee can point out the word Appeal in it. Did this committee set up any democratic process where a man could be tried by a jury of his peers, or did they give all the power to the Executive Board?

Bro. Guadagon should review his efforts when he states that forty members can initiate a referendum.

Is there any truth to the report that two members of the Executive Board were also advisors to the Committee, Bro. Joe?

Is there any truth, Bro. Joe, to the report the delegates brought back, that a motion was made in Law Committee to lay the adoption of this new Constitution over for one year to allow the membership a chance to study, and that such motion was ruled out of order by the chairman of that Committee? Is this "Scuttling"?

Can Bro. Joe condone that section which deprives those members of our Union and their widows of their insurance benefits? Can he in good conscience, face himself in the mirror, and recall that section which forces our membership out of the Union after one years illness, or six months unemployment?

Enclosed is a copy of the letter to the Trade.

April 14, 1961

Dear Sir and Brother:

Perhaps you'd like to hear of the record compiled by my opponent during his tenure of office, and it's safe to presume at his behest:

1. The elimination of the members should they become ill or lose their jobs and the subsequent loss of their insurance benefits.
2. The loss of the referendum of the trade, by imposing impossible conditions for holding a referendum.
3. The scuttling of our Constitution which took fifty years to attain now made to order by Mr. Wheatley.
4. The payment by the Brotherhood for the automobile insurance of the personal cars of all vice presidents and organizers.
5. The employment of additional organizers, despite the bankruptcy of generalware potteries, and a cutdown in the building industry.
6. The erection of a new building eight miles out in the country, amid somewhat sordid surroundings, which building we needed like I need a tree growing out the top of my head.
7. The refusal of the Board to honor the petitions for a referendum on the building, causing loss of prestige to all Unions, and paving the way for future anti-labor legislation.
8. A new high cost for organizing expenses.
9. The elimination of Honorary membership, and with it the standing of the people who have learned their trades.

These and other abuses are the motivating reasons why I seek the opportunity to serve the membership of the I. B. of O. P.

I seek to end these and other undemocratic practices that have become the rule of our Union. I hope at all times to carry myself in a manner that will command the respect of our membership, and the other side of the table too. A Union official lives in a glass bowl, and should at all times be a paragon of decorum.

Those of you who have been to Conventions, or Conferences will certainly vouch that I can fill the position to which I aspire in a manner that will reflect creditably upon the organization.

Many thanks for your fine support in the primary, and a fervent hope your members can help out in the general election.

Legislator Discusses Delays In Enactment At Lions Club

The problems of getting legislation enacted into law were related by State Rep. Warren Bettis at the meeting of the Lions Club Friday noon at the Travelers Hotel .

"There are some 62 ways legislation can be killed before it ever gets to the governor's desk for approval or veto," Bettis said.

After the legislation is placed in the hopper, it goes to the House reference committee, which can delay it while it determines what committee should hold a hearing.

The "work camp" legislation suggested by Juvenile Judge Louis Tobin for the establishment of work camps for juvenile offenders now is before the reference committee.

It then is referred to the proper committee, which hears testimony. If a controversy develops, it may be referred to a sub-committee for action before the entire committee reaches a decision, he explained.

If the bill still is alive, it goes to the rules committee where it can be tied up for an entire term if it is not satisfactory to party leaders, Bettis said.

If it finally gets on the floor of the House and is approved, then the sponsor must go through the whole procedure again with the Senate, the speaker continued.

Bettis predicted a bill he introduced providing for the establishment of community colleges will face rough going. "If community colleges are not approved this term, the legislation is certain to be introduced again in the next session."

Bettis said he understands Sen. Ross Pepple, chairman of the Senate education committee, is opposed to community colleges and plans to introduce his own legislation.

Bettis said he introduced the bill, which provides for control by local trustees reporting to the State Board of Education, because it would aid students in overcoming difficulties in their first year and make it less expensive for prospective students to receive two years' credit.

The legislator also said he is opposing a bill which would allow the State Department of Liquor Control to sell liquor through gift certificates.

"I don't believe that's the purpose of the liquor department," Bettis said, explaining he knows through his work in Juvenile Court and as an assistant prosecutor the number of calls complaining about the sale of liquor to minors.

Bettis said he also is opposing the proposed consolidation of the Soldiers and Sailors Relief Commission with the Welfare Department.

"There is a tendency in the state government to consolidate activities. We have too much government and too much shifting of responsibility. I don't believe in a centralized government."

Rep. Bettis was introduced by Ernie Lowe, program chairman. Howard E. Tice, president, presided.

Cuba

Miro Torres bit his lip and rocked in his chair as he admitted that his force was defeated and his operation ended in failure.

The rebel leader's son said on Havana television that he had been well treated since his capture. All his comments were in the form of answers to his interrogators.

"Then it is not just to say that Cuban militiamen behave like human beasts?" Miro Tores was asked.

"Absolutely not," he replied before the cameras.

When asked by the panel of interviewers what he and his men expected to find when they landed, Miro Torres said:

"We thought the militia and the army would join us."

"That is what you were told. But what did you find?"

"They fought us very hard and defeated us."

"Then you were defeated?" Miro Torres was asked.

"Yes," he answered.

Miro Torres also responded "no" when asked if any appreciable number of invaders had escaped.

Jose Miro Cardona appealed from his New York headquarters to Pope John XXIII, asking the pontiff's intercession to halt firing squad executions of captured rebels. A Havana dispatch Friday said the number shot had reached 29 in three days.

Miro Cardona said in his cable to the Vatican that the Pope's voice, "exemplifying Christian charity, could save the lives of many idealistic men" by interceding through the International Red Cross. Miro Cardona also messaged the presidents of 11 Latin American nations, asking them to "act promptly" to prevent more executions.

President Kennedy was to meet today with former President Eisenhower at Camp David, Md., to discuss at lunch the recent events in Cuba. The two have not met since Kennedy took office.

AP Correspondent Bem Price reported from Cuba that an underground source there complained bitterly over what he saw as the reasons for the failure of last weekend's invasion attempt. The source said the rebels neglected to seize radio stations for rallying the masses and did not furnish themselves with proper aerial support.

The U.N. General Assembly adopted 59-13 a mild resolution asking all nations to take whatever peaceful steps they can to remove existing tension between the United States and Cuba.

The assembly killed a provision to assign a peacemaker role to Latin American nations, reversing the U.N. Political Committee.

Demonstrations for and against Castro continued in the rest of the world. Some Asian editorial comment backed Washington.

The latest and biggest pro-Castro rally was in Mexico City, where police used clubs, tear gas and fire hoses to disperse a mob of 10,000. Injuries were reported as minor. Police moved in as the crowd was about to burn an American flag and a 10-foot effigy of Kennedy hanging from a lamp post.

Junior Women's Club Sets Chester Cancer Campaign

The Chester Junior Women's Club will begin its annual door-to-door canvass for the Cancer Fund Monday.

Mrs. Wilbert Sayers, member of the Board of Directors of the Hancock-Brooke County Cancer Society, said "This year, as in the past, the volunteers will be asking for your donations to further the national program which is again a three-fold project — research, education and service."

Each canvasser will have literature listing the "Seven Danger Signals" of cancer. Films are available anytime to clubs and civic organizations, not just during the month of April, she said.

Speakers and films may also be arranged for meetings by contacting the Cancer Center in Weirton, or through members of the club.

"The service program in Hancock County is without equal in the state," Mrs. Sayers declared. "Not only are arrangements made to transport patients to various hospitals but also a very complete loan closet is maintained in Weirton to supply at-home patients."

Six patients in the Chester area alone were supplied with beds, dressings, gowns and drugs in the past year, as part of a year-around project.

Mrs. Sayers stressed that donors should read the literature to possibly save their own lives. She is the Chester loan closet chairman for the cancer unit.

The victim was identified as Elija Collins Jr., 31.

Editor:

It appears Bro. Guadagno in his letter to the Herald resents my campaigning for office, in the Brotherhood. Despite the fact that he strives for office.

My letter to the trade made no personal reference to the constitution committee, who as we all know were an appointed committee, but rather dealt with the way they manhandled the old Constitution, pointing out various rights and privileges the membership had been deprived of.

It was critical of their work, and certainly as Americans we all have this privilege. It made reference to certain practices of the Executive Board.

As to the new Constitution being, "The most Democratic" perhaps the recent secretary of this committee can point out the word Appeal in it. Did this committee set up any democratic process where a man could be tried by a jury of his peers, or did they give all the power to the Executive Board?

Bro. Guadagon should review his efforts when he states that forty members can initiate a referendum.

Is there any truth to the report that two members of the Executive Board were also advisors to the Committee, Bro. Joe?

Is there any truth, Bro. Joe, to the report the delegates brought back, that a motion was made in Law Committee to lay the adoption of this new Constitution over for one year to allow the membership a chance to study, and that such motion was ruled out of order by the chairman of that Committee? Is this "Scuttling"?

Can Bro. Joe condone that section which deprives those members of our Union and their widows of their insurance benefits? Can he in good conscience, face himself in the mirror, and recall that section which forces our membership out of the Union after one years illness, or six months unemployment?

Enclosed is a copy of the letter to the Trade.

April 14, 1961

Dear Sir and Brother:

Perhaps you'd like to hear of the record compiled by my opponent during his tenure of office, and it's safe to presume at his behest:

1. The elimination of the members should they become ill or lose their jobs and the subsequent loss of their insurance benefits.
2. The loss of the referendum of the trade, by imposing impossible conditions for holding a referendum.
3. The scuttling of our Constitution which took fifty years to attain now made to order by Mr. Wheatley.
4. The payment by the Brotherhood for the automobile insurance of the personal cars of all vice presidents and organizers.
5. The employment of additional organizers, despite the bankruptcy of generalware potteries, and a cutdown in the building industry.
6. The erection of a new building eight miles out in the country, amid somewhat sordid surroundings, which building we needed like I need a tree growing out the top of my head.
7. The refusal of the Board to honor the petitions for a referendum on the building, causing loss of prestige to all Unions, and paving the way for future anti-labor legislation.
8. A new high cost for organizing expenses.
9. The elimination of Honorary membership, and with it the standing of the people who have learned their trades.

These and other abuses are the motivating reasons why I seek the opportunity to serve the membership of the I. B. of O. P.

I seek to end these and other undemocratic practices that have become the rule of our Union. I hope at all times to carry myself in a manner that will command the respect of our membership, and the other side of the table too. A Union official lives in a glass bowl, and should at all times be a paragon of decorum.

Those of you who have been to Conventions, or Conferences will certainly vouch that I can fill the position to which I aspire in a manner that will reflect creditably upon the organization.

Many thanks for your fine support in the primary, and a fervent hope your members can help out in the general election.

Ex-Ohio Woman Sentenced To 15 Years In Murder

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—A former Cleveland woman, Mrs. Regina Bowker, Friday was sentenced to 15 years in prison after being convicted of second-degree murder in the shooting of her husband, Alex, two years ago in nearby Spenard.

In passing sentence, Superior Court Judge Edward V. Davis said:

"We hope we will not have any more of these Spenard divorces. I do not say this facetiously. People in this area are too free with guns. For many years we have had too much use of firearms.

"I don't believe Mrs. Bowker is going to go out and shoot someone else. On the other hand I have a duty to the community at large."

The sentence contained a provision for parole in one year "as far as this court is concerned."

Mrs. Bowker's attorney said he plans to appeal the conviction. The woman contends that she did not want to kill her husband, but to get from him the truth of his relationship with another woman.

Ohio Man Pays $250,000 To Get Title To Land

CINCINNATI (AP) — C. C. Ewing, Canton Chevrolet dealer, had to pay more than twice the $110,000 he had expected Friday to acquire clear title to 67 acres in Springdale, a fast-growing suburb.

Ewing, who already had half interest in the land, faced a Cincinnati lawyer Friday whose client also wanted half interest in the land and the bidding went up to $250,000 before Ewing won.

The bidding was in the bankruptcy office of U.S. District Court. Ewing was chief creditor of the bankrupt King Bee Leasing Co., which owed him $778,958.

Ewing had been awarded half interest in the land, once owned by King Bee, because he also held a mortgage on the tract.

Charles Wilson Tennant Jr., former president of King Bee, last year was sent to prison for three years and fined $25,000 on charges of concealing assets, perjury and mail fraud.

Ex-Ohio Woman Sentenced To 15 Years In Murder

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—A former Cleveland woman, Mrs. Regina Bowker, Friday was sentenced to 15 years in prison after being convicted of second-degree murder in the shooting of her husband, Alex, two years ago in nearby Spenard.

In passing sentence, Superior Court Judge Edward V. Davis said:

"We hope we will not have any more of these Spenard divorces. I do not say this facetiously. People in this area are too free with guns. For many years we have had too much use of firearms.

"I don't believe Mrs. Bowker is going to go out and shoot someone else. On the other hand I have a duty to the community at large."

The sentence contained a provision for parole in one year "as far as this court is concerned."

Mrs. Bowker's attorney said he plans to appeal the conviction. The woman contends that she did not want to kill her husband, but to get from him the truth of his relationship with another woman.

Ohio Man Pays $250,000 To Get Title To Land

CINCINNATI (AP) — C. C. Ewing, Canton Chevrolet dealer, had to pay more than twice the $110,000 he had expected Friday to acquire clear title to 67 acres in Springdale, a fast-growing suburb.

Ewing, who already had half interest in the land, faced a Cincinnati lawyer Friday whose client also wanted half interest in the land and the bidding went up to $250,000 before Ewing won.

The bidding was in the bankruptcy office of U.S. District Court. Ewing was chief creditor of the bankrupt King Bee Leasing Co., which owed him $778,958.

Ewing had been awarded half interest in the land, once owned by King Bee, because he also held a mortgage on the tract.

Charles Wilson Tennant Jr., former president of King Bee, last year was sent to prison for three years and fined $25,000 on charges of concealing assets, perjury and mail fraud.

Gengarella's, Riverview Tangle For Junior Cage Title

Finals To Unfold Tonight At M-A

By CHUCK CRONIN
Review Sports Writer

Four nights of interesting basketball come to a climax tonight at Memorial Auditorium where Gengarellas of Midland and Riverview Florists of East Liverpool tangle for the championship of the 14th annual Junior Amateur Tournament.

Gengarellas, the 1957 champion, and Riverview Florists, still in the running after two squeakers, go for the title at 8:30.

The battle shapes up as a "natural" for the final round of the Blue and White Nonpareil Club's event as both squads are rangy and list some exceptional shooters.

Riverview Florists survived a pressurized finish in the semi-final round Friday night to edge Spinetti's Department Store of Tiltonsville, 59-58, while Gengarellas flurried in the final quarter to eliminate Marland Heights Drugs of Weirton, 64-47.

The Tiltonsville and Weirton entries will clash for consolation honors tonight at 7:30.

Melvin Coleman of Wheeling Central High, performing for Spinetti's, has showed some amazing foul shooting ability in his three performances. He's shooting 100% with 16 consecutive shots in as many attempts.

The semi-final round last night received the best attendance thus far and hardly anyone present could claim the action wasn't worth seeing.

Riverview Florists used a 14-point performance by lanky Ed Guzik of Cleveland St. Ignatius and Bill Maynard's 13 points and dazzling floor game to edge Spinetti's Store.

The game was nip-and-tuck the entire distance and was decided in the final moments. Spinetti's turned in an outstanding game despite the defeat.

Leading Tiltonsville were Coleman with seven goals and 11-for-11 at the free throw line for 25 points and big Frank Vostatek of Yorkville who scored 14. Stellar Doug Kinnison was sidelined with personal fouls for a major portion of the game and finished with only six.

Midland's Carl Anderson turned in one of the better efforts of the tournament to lead Gengarellas past Marland Heights Drugs. Playing superbly, Anderson drew applause for his efforts after leaving in the final minutes with 17 points chalked up for Gengarellas.

Matching Anderson's outburst was that of Bob Ashton, 6-8 center, of Carnegie. East Liverpool's All-Ohio Ken Cunningham continued to play standout ball both offensively and defensively. The former Potter sharpshooter hit 13 points, while All-Pennsylvania Don Yates hit nine and Ken Miller seven.

With Marland Heights playing an inspired brand of ball, the difference proved to be the huge Ashton who cleared the boards and scored well from inside to save Gengarellas several times.

Bill Smith starred for Marland Heights with a fine rebounding performance. Ed Peltz, who cut loose for 33 points Thursday night, and Joe Griffith led the Druggists with 11 points each. Bard Hickman of Weir High added 10 and Smith netted eight.

Rained-Out Bucs Share NL's Lead

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Cincinnati 5-3 Friday night to knock the Reds out of undisputed possession of first place and throw the National League into a four-way tie for the top.

St. Louis, San Franeisco, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati each owns a 5-4 record with the Dodgers only 11 percentage points behind at six victories and five defeats. And to make it even tighter, the sixth place Chicago Cubs, after defeating the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2, were only half a game off the pace.

These were the only games played in the National League. Rain forced postponement of the game in San Francisco between the Cards and Giants, and in Pittsburgh between the Milwaukee Braves and Pirates.

Wally Moon, the hottest hitter in the National League, once again sparked the Dodgers. He hit his seventh homer of the season and added a single. Johnny Roseboro also chipped in with a homer to hang a defeat upon young Jay Hook of the Reds.

Second baseman Don Zimmer figured in all the Cubs' scoring. In the first inning he singled and scored on Billy Williams' double. In the sixth, he tallied on Ron Stanto's double. In the seventh, Philadelphia outfielder Tony Curry muffed his fly ball for a three base error enabling Al Heist to score the winning run.

Don Cardwell, with the help of Don Elston in the seventh, was the winner. Robin Roberts, who deserved a better fate, lost his third of the year.

Pender 2-To-1 Favorite To Retain Title Tonight

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP)—Paul Pender's slashing left and elusive style make him a 2-1 favorite to keep his limited version of the world middleweight title against Carmen Basilio tonight in a nationally televised (ABC, 10 p.m., Eastern Standard Time) bout from Boston Garden.

It's scheduled for 15 rounds, and both fighters are very cautious about predicting it will end in less than that.

Pender, 30, a former fireman from Brookline, Mass., has boxed more than 100 rounds getting ready for his third defense of a title recognized in Europe, Massachusetts and New York.

Among the Pender advantages are age (four years), weight (about five pounds), height (almost five inches) and reach (five inches). Pender expected to weigh in close to the 160 pound limit today, and Basilio said he would be about 155.

Senators Knock Minnesota Out

Yanks And Tigers Win 5th Straight To Sweep Into Tie For First In AL

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York and Detroit swept into a first place tie in the American League Friday as the Yankees and Tigers each extended their winning streaks to five straight, after opening day defeats.

The Yankees defeated Baltimore 4-2, the Orioles suffering their fifth loss in six starts. The Tigers larrupped Los Angeles 9-1 for the Angels' fifth straight defeat.

Washington knocked Minnesota out of the league lead, ruining the Twins' home opener with a 5-3 triumph. Kansas City also lost its home opener, 5-3, to Cleveland. Chicago nipped Boston 3-2.

Mickey Mantle walloped his fourth home run in four games and Whitey Ford pitched his second victory this week as the Yankees won their fifth straight after a losing debut in Yankee Stadium.

Mantle's homer came with a runner on base in the third inning off Steve Barber who had pitched the only Oriole victory to date. Bobby Richardson began the inning with a single, took second on an error and scored on a hit by Hector Lopez.

Ford lost his chance for a second straight shutout in the fifth when Dave Philley doubled home two runs after Earl Robinson had walked and Marv Breeding had hit a two-bagger.

The Tigers won their fifth straight and the Angels lost their fifth in a row. Tiger southpaw Don Mossi spaced eight Los Angeles hits for his second victory. Rocky Colavito's three-run homer in the first, and Norm Cash's two-run double in the third were the key blows that spelled the second defeat of the year for Jerry Casale.

Washington rallied for two runs in the ninth to knock the Twins out of first place. A crowd of 24,606 looked on.

The Senators pounced on relief pitcher Ray Moore for their winning runs in the top of the ninth. Billy Klaus and Coot Veal singled and Klaus scored on Pete Daley's single. McClain then laid down a sacrifice bunt to score Veal.

Cleveland, with Vic Power providing the punch and Bob Allen the pitching, came from behind to defeat Kansas City. The Indians trailed 3-2 in the eighth when Power tripled to score Tito Francona. Power then scored the winning run when Woody Held grounded out. Allen replaced starter Jim Grant in the seventh and held the A's scoreless.

Minnie Minoso's sacrifice fly in the eighth sent Luis Aparicio home with the winning run as Cal McLish registered his first victory for the White Sox. Nellie Fox drove in the first two Chicago runs with a two-run single in the third. Pete Runnels and Gary Geiger drove in the Boston runs.

Power's Cat-Mouse Play Leads To Tribe's Victory

KANSAS CITY (AP)—If there is anything more dangerous on the basepaths than a fast man, it's a fast man with a quick mind.

Vic Power proved to be just that Friday. He won a cat-and-mouse game with Kansas Citys' shortstop, Wayne Causey, scoring from third to break a 3-3 tie to put Cleveland ahead to stay.

Power had knotted the score in the eighth inning when he tripled, scoring Bubba Phillips, who had walked.

Then Power made his coup. Woodie Held hit a grounder to Causey, who held the ball while Power stood about 10 feet off third, daring Causey to make a play for him. The instant Causey threw to first to get Held, Power broke for the plate and beat the return throw from first.

"I play with Causey," said Power later. "He wait. I wait. But I know he can't wait too long. If he do then Held beats out hit. So I wait. Causey has to throw to first and that's when I go."

The Indians got an insurance run in the ninth. Tito Francona walked and came home on Jim Piersalls' triple to give Cleveland a 5-3 victory.

The Indians touched three Kansas City hurlers for 11 hits, but as often happens, the statistics don't tell the full story.

"We get 11 hits, enough to win two games, and we have to sweat it out," said Cleveland Manager Jimmy Dykes. "After one like that you just sit quietly for 45 minutes."

Johnny Temple got three hits and Francona and Power got two each.

Temple's hitting catapulted him into the league's batting lead with .444. He and Bubba Phillips, who got a single, have hit safely in all seven games.

Cleveland got its first run in the third. Jim (Mudcat) Grant, the starting pitcher, doubled to right and went to third when Temple beat out a bunt. Grant scored on Jim Piersall's pop fly which second baseman Jerry Lumpe caught going away.

In their half of the third, the As scored on a double and a single. Cleveland got its second run in the fifth inning off starter Ray Herbert. Temple's sacrifice sent Grant, who had singled, to second. Francona singled through the box, scoring Grant.

Kansas City went ahead without a hit in the seventh inning, which was nearly disasterous for Cleveland. Grant gave way to Bob Allen after walking the bases full. Allen walked in two runs before dousing the fire, and the As led 3-2.

Sprint Relay Record Falls

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — A record in the college division, a fast four-mile relay and a mishap in a special event highlighted the first half of the 36th Kansas Relays run on wet cinders Friday.

Texas Southern's excellent sprint corps knocked off the 440-yard college relay in 41.1, three-tenths of a second better than East Texas State in 1958.

Houston University's foreign foursome — Al Lawrence, Barry Almond and Pat Clohessy of Australia and John Macy of Poland —had the second fastest time of the season in winning the four-mile relay in 17:02.3.

A 4:06.8 mile in the third leg by Almond enabled Houston to beat Missouri which led the first two miles and got a 4:11 job by anchorman Bob Kannekan. Missouri was timed in 17:05.8.

Don Styron of Southern Illinois, who set a world record in the 220-yard low hurdles while running for Northeast Louisiana State last year, brushed the seventh barrier, knocked over the eighth hurdle, fell to his knees and failed to finish the AAU 400-meter hurdles.

Ralph Boston, world and Olympic record holder for the broad-jump, and his four Tennessee A&I State teammates were withdrawn from the relays Thursday night. Tennessee A&I officials said Boston had used up his eligibility. A relays spokesman said a special broadjump for Boston had been set up but had nothing to do with eligibility.

Leafs Notch 2nd Shutout

By The Associated Press

The Toronto Maple Leafs, who chalked up 32 shutouts for an International League record in their runaway pennant victory last season, already have begun to act as if they'll wipe out that mark.

When Toronto's Chuck Hickman blanked Jersey City 8-0 on five hits Friday night, it was the Leafs' second shutout victory in five games and Toronto's fourth straight triumph. Riverboat Smith tossed a five-hitter against San Juan and won 4-0 Monday after the Leafs had lost the season opener to the Puerto Rico Marlins.

At that rate of two in five, which isn't likely to continue for long, the Leafs would about double last year's shutout record.

The defending champions, however, only moved into third place of the standings ahead of the Jerseys. The Columbus Jets and Richmond Virginians remained undefeated in three games each as Columbus blanked Rochester 3-0

Finals To Unfold Tonight At M-A

By CHUCK CRONIN
Review Sports Writer

Four nights of interesting basketball come to a climax tonight at Memorial Auditorium where Gengarellas of Midland and Riverview Florists of East Liverpool tangle for the championship of the 14th annual Junior Amateur Tournament.

Gengarellas, the 1957 champion, and Riverview Florists, still in the running after two squeakers, go for the title at 8:30.

The battle shapes up as a "natural" for the final round of the Blue and White Nonpareil Club's event as both squads are rangy and list some exceptional shooters.

Riverview Florists survived a pressurized finish in the semi-final round Friday night to edge Spinetti's Department Store of Tiltonsville, 59-58, while Gengarellas flurried in the final quarter to eliminate Marland Heights Drugs of Weirton, 64-47.

The Tiltonsville and Weirton entries will clash for consolation honors tonight at 7:30.

Melvin Coleman of Wheeling Central High, performing for Spinetti's, has showed some amazing foul shooting ability in his three performances. He's shooting 100% with 16 consecutive shots in as many attempts.

The semi-final round last night received the best attendance thus far and hardly anyone present could claim the action wasn't worth seeing.

Riverview Florists used a 14-point performance by lanky Ed Guzik of Cleveland St. Ignatius and Bill Maynard's 13 points and dazzling floor game to edge Spinetti's Store.

The game was nip-and-tuck the entire distance and was decided in the final moments. Spinetti's turned in an outstanding game despite the defeat.

Leading Tiltonsville were Coleman with seven goals and 11-for-11 at the free throw line for 25 points and big Frank Vostatek of Yorkville who scored 14. Stellar Doug Kinnison was sidelined with personal fouls for a major portion of the game and finished with only six.

Midland's Carl Anderson turned in one of the better efforts of the tournament to lead Gengarellas past Marland Heights Drugs. Playing superbly, Anderson drew applause for his efforts after leaving in the final minutes with 17 points chalked up for Gengarellas.

Matching Anderson's outburst was that of Bob Ashton, 6-8 center, of Carnegie. East Liverpool's All-Ohio Ken Cunningham continued to play standout ball both offensively and defensively. The former Potter sharpshooter hit 13 points, while All-Pennsylvania Don Yates hit nine and Ken Miller seven.

With Marland Heights playing an inspired brand of ball, the difference proved to be the huge Ashton who cleared the boards and scored well from inside to save Gengarellas several times.

Bill Smith starred for Marland Heights with a fine rebounding performance. Ed Peltz, who cut loose for 33 points Thursday night, and Joe Griffith led the Druggists with 11 points each. Bard Hickman of Weir High added 10 and Smith netted eight.

Rained-Out Bucs Share NL's Lead

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Cincinnati 5-3 Friday night to knock the Reds out of undisputed possession of first place and throw the National League into a four-way tie for the top.

St. Louis, San Francisco, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati each owns a 5-4 record with the Dodgers only 11 percentage points behind at six victories and five defeats. And to make it even tighter, the sixth place Chicago Cubs, after defeating the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2, were only half a game off the pace.

These were the only games played in the National League. Rain forced postponement of the game in San Francisco between the Cards and Giants, and in Pittsburgh between the Milwaukee Braves and Pirates.

Wally Moon, the hottest hitter in the National League, once again sparked the Dodgers. He hit his seventh homer of the season and added a single. Johnny Roseboro also chipped in with a homer to hang a defeat upon young Jay Hook of the Reds.

Second baseman Don Zimmer figured in all the Cubs' scoring. In the first inning he singled and scored on Billy Williams' double. In the sixth, he tallied on Ron Stanto's double. In the seventh, Philadelphia outfielder Tony Curry muffed his fly ball for a three base error enabling Al Heist to score the winning run.

Don Cardwell, with the help of Don Elston in the seventh, was the winner. Robin Roberts, who deserved a better fate, lost his third of the year.

Pender 2-To-1 Favorite To Retain Title Tonight

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP)—Paul Pender's slashing left and elusive style make him a 2-1 favorite to keep his limited version of the world middleweight title against Carmen Basilio tonight in a nationally televised (ABC, 10 p.m., Eastern Standard Time) bout from Boston Garden.

It's scheduled for 15 rounds, and both fighters are very cautious about predicting it will end in less than that.

Pender, 30, a former fireman from Brookline, Mass., has boxed more than 100 rounds getting ready for his third defense of a title recognized in Europe, Massachusetts and New York.

Among the Pender advantages are age (four years), weight (about five pounds), height (almost five inches) and reach (five inches). Pender expected to weigh in close to the 160 pound limit today, and Basilio said he would be about 155.

Power's Cat-Mouse Play Leads To Tribe's Victory

KANSAS CITY (AP)—If there is anything more dangerous on the basepaths than a fast man, it's a fast man with a quick mind.

Vic Power proved to be just that Friday. He won a cat-and-mouse game with Kansas Citys' shortstop, Wayne Causey, scoring from third to break a 3-3 tie to put Cleveland ahead to stay.

Power had knotted the score in the eighth inning when he tripled, scoring Bubba Phillips, who had walked.

Then Power made his coup. Woodie Held hit a grounder to Causey, who held the ball while Power stood about 10 feet off third, daring Causey to make a play for him. The instant Causey threw to first to get Held, Power broke for the plate and beat the return throw from first.

Senators Knock Minnesota Out

Yanks And Tigers Win 5th Straight To Sweep Into Tie For First In AL

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York and Detroit swept into a first place tie in the American League Friday as the Yankees and Tigers each extended their winning streaks to five straight, after opening day defeats.

The Yankees defeated Baltimore 4-2, the Orioles suffering their fifth loss in six starts. The Tigers larrupped Los Angeles 9-1 for the Angels' fifth straight defeat.

Washington knocked Minnesota out of the league lead, ruining the Twins' home opener with a 5-3 triumph. Kansas City also lost its home opener, 5-3, to Cleveland. Chicago nipped Boston 3-2.

Mickey Mantle walloped his fourth home run in four games and Whitey Ford pitched his second victory this week as the Yankees won their fifth straight after a losing debut in Yankee Stadium.

Mantle's homer came with a runner on base in the third inning off Steve Barber who had pitched the only Oriole victory to date. Bobby Richardson began the inning with a single, took second on an error and scored on a hit by Hector Lopez.

Ford lost his chance for a second straight shutout in the fifth when Dave Philley doubled home two runs after Earl Robinson had walked and Marv Breeding had hit a two-bagger.

The Tigers won their fifth straight and the Angels lost their fifth in a row. Tiger southpaw Don Mossi spaced eight Los Angeles hits for his second victory. Rocky Colavito's three-run homer in the first, and Norm Cash's two-run double in the third were the key blows that spelled the second defeat of the year for Jerry Casale.

Washington rallied for two runs in the ninth to knock the Twins out of first place. A crowd of 24,606 looked on.

The Senators pounced on relief pitcher Ray Moore for their winning runs in the top of the ninth. Billy Klaus and Coot Veal singled and Klaus scored on Pete Daley's single. McClain then laid down a sacrifice bunt to score Veal.

Cleveland, with Vic Power providing the punch and Bob Allen the pitching, came from behind to defeat Kansas City. The Indians trailed 3-2 in the eighth when Power tripled to score Tito Francona. Power then scored the winning run when Woody Held grounded out. Allen replaced starter Jim Grant in the seventh and held the A's scoreless.

Minnie Minoso's sacrifice fly in the eighth sent Luis Aparicio home with the winning run as Cal McLish registered his first victory for the White Sox. Nellie Fox drove in the first two Chicago runs with a two-run single in the third. Pete Runnels and Gary Geiger drove in the Boston runs.

Leafs Notch 2nd Shutout

By The Associated Press

The Toronto Maple Leafs, who chalked up 32 shutouts for an International League record in their runaway pennant victory last season, already have begun to act as if they'll wipe out that mark.

When Toronto's Chuck Hickman blanked Jersey City 8-0 on five hits Friday night, it was the Leafs' second shutout victory in five games and Toronto's fourth straight triumph. Riverboat Smith tossed a five-hitter against San Juan and won 4-0 Monday after the Leafs had lost the season opener to the Puerto Rico Marlins.

At that rate of two in five, which isn't likely to continue for long, the Leafs would about double last year's shutout record.

The defending champions, however, only moved into third place of the standings ahead of the Jerseys. The Columbus Jets and Richmond Virginians remained undefeated in three games each as Columbus blanked Rochester 3-0

Palmer Challenges Thomson For Houston Golf Lead

Trails Pacer By Stroke In $40,000 Play

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP)—Arnold Palmer, one stroke off the pace, challenged Peter Thomson today for the third round lead of the $40,000 Houston Golf Classic.

Playing in the same threesome, Palmer, the king of golf for 1960, sought the lead the former British Open champion from Australia has held through 36 holes.

Thomson closed in a strong wind with eight straight pars Friday for a 65-71—136 that left him one stroke ahead of Palmer, Jerry Barber, Johnny Pott, and Lionel Hebert.

Palmer was the last of the 137's to finish and he saw an 18-foot birdie putt that would have given him a tie for the lead roll two feet past the cup on the final green. But his 69 and a first round 68 gave him two strokes on Thomson.

Tommy Bolt, the No. 11 all-time money winner in golf, had another of his angry spells while claiming the gallery at the 18th green was heckling him. Gary Player, the new Masters champion from South Africa, fired his caddy before moving onto the back nine. A group of Negroes picketed the memorial course because Charles Sifford, the first Negro ever to play in a PGA tournament in the South, was not in the classic.

The crowd noise that Bolt said was heckling came at a crucial moment. It happened as he was putting from the fringe of the 18th green. Had the shot been good, Bolt would have tied Thomson. But it stopped six feet from the cup. He refused to putt until a gallery marshal asked the crowd to keep quiet. He missed the putt, took a bogey and posted a 69-69—138.

Player refused to discuss the caddy confusion. Whatever the cause, the situation did not prevent him from taking a 72-69—141 that gained two strokes on Thomson.

Jerry Pittman, 24, a newcomer from Tulsa, was among those having back nine troubles. Pittman, two strokes off the pace after 18 holes, was six under par after 27 holes. He had three bogies and a double bogey on the windy back nine and dropped to a 67-72—139.

Peter Thomson, 65-71—136.
Jerry Barber, 68-69—137.
Johnny Pott, 67-70—137.
Lionel Hebert, 69-68—137.
Arnold Palmer, 68-69—137.
Tommy Bolt, 69-69—138.
Freddie Haas, 68-71—139.
Jerry Pittman, 67-72—139.
Gordon Jones, 67-72—139.

Akron Man, 32, Draws 8 Years

CLEVELAND (AP)—"You are a menace to society. I can not permit this man to walk the streets."

These words by U.S. District Court Judge James C. Connell fell on the ears of Frank Cypryla, 32, of Akron, who was sentenced Friday to eight years in the federal penitentiary.

Cypryla, who has run afoul of the law numerous times since he was 14, had pleaded guilty to a charge of assaulting a federal officer with a deadly weapon. He disarmed a federal agent after being sought for questioning in the $135,000 holdup of the Boardman Branch of the Mahoning National Bank near Youngstown. Cypryla was arrested near Massillon Jan. 23 after he was wounded in the leg following an exchange of gunfire with police.

James F. Dyce, 16, and Richard Ivan Coppock, 16, both of New Waterford R.D. 1, received 60-day suspensions of their driver license for speeding and reckless operation, respectively. They were cited by the State Highway Patrol.

Koufax Fans 11 As Wally Rockets 7th 'Moon-Shot'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Up to this year Sandy Koufax could never have hoped to prove that spring is the time when a young man is fancy.

But Koufax, who normally grows wilder than devil grass at this time of year, may be approaching that point in his pitching career where he discovers before May Day that the strike zone is really not high and outside.

Friday night, for the first time in his six years in the National League, the swift and unpredictable Los Angeles lefthander won a game in April. And, with the exception of one pitch, he did it with mid-season dispatch, striking out 11 and walking only three as the Dodgers defeated Cincinnati, 5-3. Koufax, cuffed around in his first start, is now 1-1.

Wally Moon, whose springtime performance has been even more astonishing, hit his seventh home run in 10 games and finished the night batting an improbable .543. Koufax, who would think nothing of throwing 150 or 160 pitches in an early season game, threw only 124 and 80 of them were strikes. The Reds scored all their runs on a third inning homer by Frank Robinson and got only two hits thereafter.

"That pitch Robinson hit," Koufax said, "was only about two inches from the spot I pitched him in the eighth inning when he grounded into a double play."

"Sandy has been getting a little better each spring," said Manager Walt Alston. "This year he had a good late spring. I remember the first time he came down to Florida with us. Why, you couldn't even play catch with the guy without him throwing half the balls over your head. He's had a pretty bad control problem to overcome."

Koufax has always had the good strikeout pitch. Friday night was the 21st time he fanned 10 or more in a single game and it was also the first time he ever won a game before the first week of May. His earliest previous victory came on May 6, 1957, against Milwaukee.

"You ask Sandy how a guy should be pitched," Alston said, "and he'll give you a pretty good answer. With him it has been a question of doing it."

Moon got his homer Friday night off loser Jay Hook in the second, the same inning Johnny Roseboro homered for the Dodgers with a man aboard. Like all six of Moon's previous homers, this one was a slicing shot over the left field screen.

Dodger publicity man Red Patterson announced Moon was ahead of the pace Babe Ruth set the year he hit 60 home runs.

"Yeah," Moon said, "I'm really worried about that."

Planners Hear Geographer 'Satellites' Are Urged To Combat Urban Sprawl

CINCINNATI (AP) — A University of Cincinnati geographer has urged city planners to consider a chain of suburban satellites to combat urban sprawl.

Dr. Hans H. Carol, associate professor of geography, told the Ohio Academy of Science Friday night that the satellite would be a commercial core surrounded by residential developments, with industrial parks on the fringes.

He said these communities could serve populations of 10,000 to 30,000 persons. The Cincinnati suburb of Greenhills is already at a very successful stage of this type of development, he said.

To support larger populations, Dr. Carol said, more elaborate planning for industry would be needed, and other types of organization would be used.

He said, "Today, such concepts may be considered of theoretical value only.

As dissatisfaction increases with the urban sprawl, planners will seek better ways of urban growth. Such concepts may then serve as guide posts to more meaningful forms of urban life."

Dr. Carol predicted that the population increase in the United States will be virtually all concentrated in metropolitan areas in the next decades.

He said, "Homes and employment will have to be provided for some 50 million persons. No significant signs indicate that the trend of urban sprawl of the past will not continue in the decades to come.

"This may lead to what has been referred to as the total pollution of metropolitan areas."

Robert H. Chilcote of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad told the academy he thinks communities should start preserving good land for future industrial use.

He said, "The necessity for manufacturing in a growing economy has been established and the need for preservation of land for future industrial use has been recognized.

"The growing scarcity of good industrial sites require that land for factories be conserved like any other natural resource."

Chilcote said manufacturing plans need large, level, well-drained sites, usually suitable for many other kinds of development, and as competition for available land becomes keener, more conflicts will occur.

Democrat Club Asked To Push Formula Repeal

PAINESVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Ralph S. Locher, Cleveland law director, Friday night urged members of the Lake County Democratic Club to get behind the effort to repeal Ohio's utility rate making formula.

"Most of us pay more for our telephone, gas and electricity than for real estate taxes to operate our schools and municipal and county governments," he said. "The aggregate of all such bills in Ohio exceeds $1 billion per year, greater than our state budget."

Legislation opposing the formula is pending in the Ohio legislature, but prospects for approval are considered slim.

"Utilities in Ohio have consistently been able to make about 15 per cent higher profits . . .," said Locher, adding:

"The Ohio Bell Telephone Co. is always one of the two highest earners in the Bell system. To the extent that we pay excessive rates to Ohio Bell, we are in effect subsidizing the rest of the system.

"East Ohio Gas Co. is almost always the star earner of the Consolidated Natural Gas System. There, again, the consumers are subsidizing the other customers of consolidated in other states.

"Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co.'s charges are excessive by about $6 million per year, according to competent experts hired by the municipalities of Cuyahoga County."

Applications Slated In Feed Grain Setup

LISBON — Clifford E. Shaw, chairman of the Columbiana County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, said the ASC office in Lisbon will be ready to accept applications for the feed grain program Monday.

The corn base and payment rate per acre have been computed for individual farms where corn was planted in 1959 and 1960. Notices will be mailed to each of these farm operators not later than Monday. There are 1,750 farms in the county.

Farmers interested in or intending to participate must file their applications later than June 1, Shaw said.

Girl Revived, Heart Stopped After Mishap

CLEVELAND (AP)—The heart of 11-year-old Belinda Drummond, which had stopped after she was hit by a car Friday, was revived when doctors at Suburban Community Hospital used closed heart massage.

Belinda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Johnson, was hit while walking in the street with a group of pupils on her way home from school, police said. There is no sidewalk where the accident occurred.

The child's heart was beating normally after 10 minutes of the treatment, doctors said.

Bucks Shade Purdue, 4-2, In Loop Play

By The Associated Press

The Big Ten baseball season opened Friday with three time champion Minnesota stumbling to a 5-3 defeat on a pair of Michigan homers.

Sophomore Shortstop Dick Honig slugged a two-run homer in the ninth to break up a 3-3 tie after first baseman Barry Marshall had accounted for Michigan's three runs with a homer in the sixth inning.

Marshall's blast overcame a 2-0 Minnesota lead. The Gophers moved into a tie in the ninth on a home run by John Anderson before Honig unloaded his game-winning drive.

Ohio State defeated Purdue, 4-2; Michigan State edged Iowa, 3-2; Indiana bombed Illinois 12-1; and Wisconsin blanked Northwestern, 2-0. Northwestern was the only home team to lose.

Ohio State scored all of its runs in the seventh inning with Ray Peterson supplying the big hit, a two-run triple.

All Big Ten teams will play doubleheaders today with Purdue at Indiana, Iowa at Michigan, Wisconsin at Northwestern, Illinois at Ohio State and Minnesota at Michigan State.

Bomb Damages Home In Warren

Little, his wife, three children and a guest were asleep in the dwelling in the northeast section of the city, but were not hurt

The blast was the city's third in less than two months and the 71st unsolved bombing in Mahoning Valley in the last 9½ years.

Little, a Democrat, could give no reason for the bombing. Police had no immediate explanation or theory for the blast. Det. Capt. Vern Peeble said the blast was the equivalent of one stick of dynamite.

The bomb, planted near the front porch, splintered the lattice work, shattered front windows and damaged the porch roof and a station wagon parked in the driveway. No damage estimate was available.

Miss McIntire Captures Second Straight Title

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Barbara McIntire has added another chapter to her Pinehurst success story.

The dimpled 26-year-old Lake Park, Fla., golfer won her second successive North and South amateur title with a 3 and 1 victory over Judy Bell of Wichita, Kan., in Friday's finals, scheduled for 18 holes.

The victory was her third here in five years. In the two losing years she was runnerup and a semifinalist.

In nine successive tournament appearances in the 59-year-old classic she has won 27 of 33 matches. Over the last five years her record is 22-2.

Although she didn't have these impressive statistics at hand, that is what Miss Bell meant at the trophy presentation ceremony when she noted:

Barbara, who doesn't plan to defend her British amateur title this year ("where would I get $1,000 for the trip?" she asked) won the first hole and was in front the rest of the way.

Kentucky Derby Barometer Cites Four-Twenty

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A barometer that has predicted three of the past four Kentucky Derby winners — Keeneland's Forerunner Purse—today pointed at Alberta Ranches' Four-and-Twenty.

The 3-year-old son of Blue Prince-Sixpence 2nd led all the way Friday and took an easy two-length victory over J. Graham Brown's He's A Pistol. Clark and Radkovich's Ronnie's Ace was third, 1¾ lengths back.

The favorite in the seven-furlong Derby prep, Fred W. Hooper's Crozier, threatened only before the turn for home. He then faded and finished fourth in a field of six Derby eligibles.

The forerunner is a more prestigious race than its $7,500 purse indicates because of its unique reputation:

Of its past four winners, three have gone on to win the run for the roses at Churchill Downs.

Palmer Challenges Thomson For Houston Golf Lead

Trails Pacer By Stroke In $40,000 Play

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP)—Arnold Palmer, one stroke off the pace, challenged Peter Thomson today for the third round lead of the $40,000 Houston Golf Classic.

Playing in the same threesome, Palmer, the king of golf for 1960, sought the lead the former British Open champion from Australia has held through 36 holes.

Thomson closed in a strong wind with eight straight pars Friday for a 65-71—136 that left him one stroke ahead of Palmer, Jerry Barber, Johnny Pott, and Lionel Hebert.

Palmer was the last of the 137's to finish and he saw an 18-foot birdie putt that would have given him a tie for the lead roll two feet past the cup on the final green. But his 69 and a first round 68 gave him two strokes on Thomson.

Tommy Bolt, the No. 11 all-time money winner in golf, had another of his angry spells while claiming the gallery at the 18th green was heckling him. Gary Player, the new Masters champion from South Africa, fired his caddy before moving onto the back nine. A group of Negroes picketed the memorial course because Charles Sifford, the first Negro ever to play in a PGA tournament in the South, was not in the classic.

The crowd noise that Bolt said was heckling came at a crucial moment. It happened as he was putting from the fringe of the 18th green. Had the shot been good, Bolt would have tied Thomson. But it stopped six feet from the cup. He refused to putt until a gallery marshal asked the crowd to keep quiet. He missed the putt, took a bogey and posted a 69-69—138.

Player refused to discuss the caddy confusion. Whatever the cause, the situation did not prevent him from taking a 72-69—141 that gained two strokes on Thomson.

Jerry Pittman, 24, a newcomer from Tulsa, was among those having back nine troubles. Pittman, two strokes off the pace after 18 holes, was six under par after 27 holes. He had three bogies and a double bogey on the windy back nine and dropped to a 67-72—139.

The 36-hole leaders:
Peter Thomson, 65-71—136.
Jerry Barber, 68-69—137.
Johnny Pott, 67-70—137.
Lionel Hebert, 69-68—137.
Arnold Palmer, 68-69—137.
Tommy Bolt, 69-69—138.
Freddie Haas, 68-71—139.
Jerry Pittman, 67-72—139.
Gordon Jones, 67-72—139.

Akron Man, 32, Draws 8 Years

CLEVELAND (AP)—"You are a menace to society. I can not permit this man to walk the streets."

These words by U.S. District Court Judge James C. Connell fell on the ears of Frank Cypryla, 32, of Akron, who was sentenced Friday to eight years in the federal penitentiary.

Cypryla, who has run afoul of the law numerous times since he was 14, had pleaded guilty to a charge of assaulting a federal officer with a deadly weapon. He disarmed a federal agent after being sought for questioning in the $135,000 holdup of the Boardman Branch of the Mahoning National Bank near Youngstown. Cypryla was arrested near Massillon Jan. 23 after he was wounded in the leg following an exchange of gunfire with police.

2 Permits Suspended For Youthful Drivers

LISBON — Two youths were given driving suspensions and another jailed in Traffic Court hearings this week at the Courthouse.

Barry Lee Vankirk, 17, of 645 E. Main St., East Palestine, received 15 days in the County Jail for speeding and driving an unsafe vehicle. He was cited by East Palestine police.

James F. Dyce, 16, and Richard Ivan Coppock, 16, both of New Waterford R.D. 1, received 60-day suspensions of their driver license for speeding and reckless operation, respectively. They were cited by the State Highway Patrol.

Editor-Publisher Dies

WINNIPEG, Man. (AP) — Victor Sifton, 64, editor and publisher of the Winnipeg Free Press, collapsed and died Friday at Winnipeg Clinic.

London was the first city in the world to attain a population of a million.

ELIO CHACON'S English is none too good but he has little trouble in telling what he would rather be doing at this time. The Red second baseman is back in Cincinnati after being spiked by Willie Mays in a game Tuesday in San Francisco. It took eight stitches to close the wound in the right leg above the knee of the spunky little Venezuelan. Chacon will be out for two weeks. (UPI Telephoto)

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Up to this year Sandy Koufax could never have hoped to prove that spring is the time when a young man is fancy.

But Koufax, who normally grows wilder than devil grass at this time of year, may be approaching that point in his pitching career where he discovers before May Day that the strike zone is really not high and outside.

Friday night, for the first time in his six years in the National League, the swift and unpredictable Los Angeles lefthander won a game in April. And, with the exception of one pitch, he did it with mid-season dispatch, striking out 11 and walking only three as the Dodgers defeated Cincinnati, 5-3. Koufax, cuffed around in his first start, is now 1-1.

Wally Moon, whose springtime performance has been even more astonishing, hit his seventh home run in 10 games and finished the night batting an improbable .543. Koufax, who would think nothing of throwing 150 or 160 pitches in an early season game, threw only 124 and 80 of them were strikes. The Reds scored all their runs on a third inning homer by Frank Robinson and got only two hits thereafter.

"That pitch Robinson hit," Koufax said, "was only about two inches from the spot I pitched him in the eighth inning when he grounded into a double play."

"Sandy has been getting a little better each spring," said Manager Walt Alston. "This year he had a good late spring. I remember the first time he came down to Florida with us. Why, you couldn't even play catch with the guy without him throwing half the balls over your head. He's had a pretty bad control problem to overcome."

Koufax has always had the good strikeout pitch. Friday night was the 21st time he fanned 10 or more in a single game and it was also the first time he ever won a game before the first week of May. His earliest previous victory came on May 6, 1957, against Milwaukee.

"You ask Sandy how a guy should be pitched," Alston said, "and he'll give you a pretty good answer. With him it has been a question of doing it."

Moon got his homer Friday night off loser Jay Hook in the second, the same inning Johnny Roseboro homered for the Dodgers with a man aboard. Like all six of Moon's previous homers, this one was a slicing shot over the left field screen.

Dodger publicity man Red Patterson announced Moon was ahead of the pace Babe Ruth set the year he hit 60 home runs.

"Yeah," Moon said, "I'm really worried about that."

Planners Hear Geographer

'Satellites' Are Urged To Combat Urban Sprawl

CINCINNATI (AP) — A University of Cincinnati geographer has urged city planners to consider a chain of suburban satellites to combat urban sprawl.

Dr. Hans H. Carol, associate professor of geography, told the Ohio Academy of Science Friday night that the satellite would be a commercial core surrounded by residential developments, with industrial parks on the fringes.

He said these communities could serve populations of 10,000 to 30,000 persons. The Cincinnati suburb of Greenhills is already at a very successful stage of this type of development, he said.

To support larger populations, Dr. Carol said, more elaborate planning for industry would be needed, and other types of organization would be used.

He said, "Today, such concepts may be considered of theoretical value only.

As dissatisfaction increases with the urban sprawl, planners will seek better ways of urban growth. Such concepts may then serve as guide posts to more meaningful forms of urban life."

Dr. Carol predicted that the population increase in the United States will be virtually all concentrated in metropolitan areas in the next decades.

He said, "Homes and employment will have to be provided for some 50 million persons. No significant signs indicate that the trend of urban sprawl of the past will not continue in the decades to come.

"This may lead to what has been referred to as the total pollution of metropolitan areas."

Robert H. Chilcote of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad told the academy he thinks communities should start preserving good land for future industrial use.

He said, "The necessity for manufacturing in a growing economy has been established and the need for preservation of land for future industrial use has been recognized.

"The growing scarcity of good industrial sites require that land for factories be conserved like any other natural resource."

Chilcote said manufacturing plans need large, level, well-drained sites, usually suitable for many other kinds of development, and as competition for available land becomes keener, more conflicts will occur.

Democrat Club Asked To Push Formula Repeal

PAINESVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Ralph S. Locher, Cleveland law director, Friday night urged members of the Lake County Democratic Club to get behind the effort to repeal Ohio's utility rate making formula.

"Most of us pay more for our telephone, gas and electricity than for real estate taxes to operate our schools and municipal and county governments," he said. "The aggregate of all such bills in Ohio exceeds $1 billion per year, greater than our state budget."

Legislation opposing the formula is pending in the Ohio legislature, but prospects for approval are considered slim.

"Utilities in Ohio have consistently been able to make about 15 per cent higher profits . . .," said Locher, adding:

"The Ohio Bell Telephone Co. is always one of the two highest earners in the Bell system. To the extent that we pay excessive rates to Ohio Bell, we are in effect subsidizing the rest of the system.

"East Ohio Gas Co. is almost always the star earner of the Consolidated Natural Gas System. There, again, the consumers are subsidizing the other customers of consolidated in other states.

"Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co.'s charges are excessive by about $6 million per year, according to competent experts hired by the municipalities of Cuyahoga County."

Applications Slated In Feed Grain Setup

LISBON — Clifford E. Shaw, chairman of the Columbiana County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, said the ASC office in Lisbon will be ready to accept applications for the feed grain program Monday.

The corn base and payment rate per acre have been computed for individual farms where corn was planted in 1959 and 1960. Notices will be mailed to each of these farm operators not later than Monday. There are 1,750 farms in the county.

Farmers interested in or intending to participate must file their applications later than June 1, Shaw said.

Girl Revived, Heart Stopped After Mishap

CLEVELAND (AP)—The heart of 11-year-old Belinda Drummond, which had stopped after she was hit by a car Friday, was revived when doctors at Suburban Community Hospital used closed heart massage.

Belinda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Johnson, was hit while walking in the street with a group of pupils on her way home from school, police said. There is no sidewalk where the accident occurred.

Bucks Shade Purdue, 4-2, In Loop Play

By The Associated Press

The Big Ten baseball season opened Friday with three time champion Minnesota stumbling to a 5-3 defeat on a pair of Michigan homers.

Sophomore Shortstop Dick Honig slugged a two-run homer in the ninth to break up a 3-3 tie after first baseman Barry Marshall had accounted for Michigan's three runs with a homer in the sixth inning.

Ohio State defeated Purdue, 4-2; Michigan State edged Iowa, 3-2; Indiana bombed Illinois 12-1; and Wisconsin blanked Northwestern, 2-0. Northwestern was the only home team to lose.

Ohio State scored all of its runs in the seventh inning with Ray Peterson supplying the big hit, a two-run triple.

Bomb Damages Home In Warren

Little, his wife, three children and a guest were asleep in the dwelling in the northeast section of the city, but were not hurt

The blast was the city's third in less than two months and the 71st unsolved bombing in Mahoning Valley in the last 9½ years.

Little, a Democrat, could give no reason for the bombing. Police had no immediate explanation or theory for the blast. Det. Capt. Vern Peeble said the blast was the equivalent of one stick of dynamite.

Miss McIntire Captures Second Straight Title

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Barbara McIntire has added another chapter to her Pinehurst success story.

The dimpled 26-year-old Lake Park, Fla., golfer won her second successive North and South amateur title with a 3 and 1 victory over Judy Bell of Wichita, Kan., in Friday's finals, scheduled for 18 holes.

The victory was her third here in five years. In the two losing years she was runnerup and a semifinalist.

In nine successive tournament appearances in the 59-year-old classic she has won 27 of 33 matches. Over the last five years her record is 22-2.

Barbara, who doesn't plan to defend her British amateur title this year ("where would I get $1,000 for the trip?" she asked) won the first hole and was in front the rest of the way.

In close pursuit was Ruth Jessen, the Seattle blonde, who had a 71, while Kathy Whitworth of Jal, N.M., and Mary Lena Faulk of Sea Island, Ga., were tied for third place at 72.

Kentucky Derby Barometer Cites Four-Twenty

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A barometer that has predicted three of the past four Kentucky Derby winners — Keeneland's Forerunner Purse—today pointed at Alberta Ranches' Four-and-Twenty.

The 3-year-old son of Blue Prince-Sixpence 2nd led all the way Friday and took an easy two-length victory over J. Graham Brown's He's A Pistol. Clark and Radkovich's Ronnie's Ace was third, 1¾ lengths back.

The favorite in the seven-furlong Derby prep, Fred W. Hooper's Crozier, threatened only before the turn for home. He then faded and finished fourth in a field of six Derby eligibles.

The forerunner is a more prestigious race than its $7,500 purse indicates because of its unique reputation:

Ohio Reports 2,000 Cases Of Hepatitis

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—State Health Department officials say about 2,000 cases of infectious hepatitis—the so-called "yellow jaundice"—have been reported this year, compared with about 2,700 in the entire record year of 1960.

The department's communicable diseases division also said it has received two official reports of polio, one the death of a woman in Chillicothe in January. However, the total is lower than in 1960 at this time.

Man Finds Wife, Elderly Kin Tied

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Michael Grubiss, a prominent Youngstown businessman, returned to his fashionable home in suburban Boardman Friday night and found his wife and mother-in-law tied to chairs and the home ransacked. His 84-year-old mother-in-law died a half hour later, apparently of a heart attack.

Mrs. Grubiss, 55, and her mother Mrs. Veronica Podresky, were alone. The men tied them up and asked the location of a safe. Told there was no safe, the men then ransacked the house and took $200 from Mrs. Grubiss' purse plus a diamond ring.

Coroner David A. Belinky said Mrs. Podresky apparently died of a heart attack.

Room Available For Students At Some Colleges

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—More than half of Ohio's 31 independent colleges and universities still have room for at least 1,424 new students for the autumn semester.

The Ohio Foundation of Independent Colleges said dormitory space for both men and women is available at Ashland, Baldwin-Wallace, Defiance, Findlay, Heidelberg, Muskingum, Ohio Northern and Wilmington.

Dormitory space for men only is reported at Capital, Marietta and Mount Union, and for women only at Mary Manse.

Most of the schools also will still admit students who plan to live at home or arrange their own living quarters. Among those accepting these commuter students only are Bluffton, St. John in Cleveland for 10 nursing students and 20 in elementary education, St. Mary of the Springs and Wittenberg.

Research Center Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $17.5 million request for an environmental research center at the Lewis Research Center in Cleveland was among $33 million cut by the budget bureau from the requests of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, it has been reported. All of the requests were for construction of research facilities during the coming fiscal year.

Man Finds Wife, Elderly Kin Tied

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Michael Grubiss, a prominent Youngstown businessman, returned to his fashionable home in suburban Boardman Friday night and found his wife and mother-in-law tied to chairs and the home ransacked. His 84-year-old mother-in-law died a half hour later, apparently of a heart attack.

Mrs. Grubiss, 55, and her mother Mrs. Veronica Podresky, were alone. The men tied them up and asked the location of a safe. Told there was no safe, the men then ransacked the house and took $200 from Mrs. Grubiss' purse plus a diamond ring.

Coroner David A. Belinky said Mrs. Podresky apparently died of a heart attack.

Room Available For Students At Some Colleges

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—More than half of Ohio's 31 independent colleges and universities still have room for at least 1,424 new students for the autumn semester.

The Ohio Foundation of Independent Colleges said dormitory space for both men and women is available at Ashland, Baldwin-Wallace, Defiance, Findlay, Heidelberg, Muskingum, Ohio Northern and Wilmington.

Dormitory space for men only is reported at Capital, Marietta and Mount Union, and for women only at Mary Manse.

Most of the schools also will still admit students who plan to live at home or arrange their own living quarters. Among those accepting these commuter students only are Bluffton, St. John in Cleveland for 10 nursing students and 20 in elementary education, St. Mary of the Springs and Wittenberg.

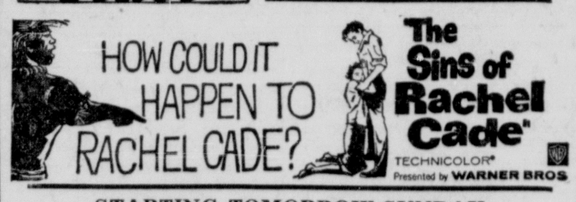

Research Center Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $17.5 million request for an environmental research center at the Lewis Research Center in Cleveland was among $33 million cut by the budget bureau from the requests of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, it has been reported. All of the requests were for construction of research facilities during the coming fiscal year.

"YOUR LAND AND MY LAND"

The Best Investment On Earth Is In The Earth

DID YOU KNOW THAT MOST OF ALL CAPITAL INVESTMENT, OR WEALTH, IS IN THE LAND? THAT THE DESIRE, FOR MORE LAND FOR EXPANSION, WAS THE CAUSE OF THE TWO LAST GREAT WARS? DID YOU KNOW, THAT IN THE DAYS, WHEN OUR FOREFATHERS WERE GOING WEST IN COVERED WAGONS, MEN AND THEIR FAMILIES WERE SCALPED AND MURDERED IN THEIR DESIRE FOR LAND, THEN THERE WAS NO MONETARY PRICE SET ON LAND, YET THOSE EARLY AMERICANS PAID THE HIGHEST PRICE IT HAS EVER SOLD FOR. THE PRICE THEN "LIFE FOR LAND", NOW ONLY A FEW DOLLARS—NOT YOUR LIFE. IF THE PRIVILEGE TO OWN IT, SHOULD EVER CEASE, THE PRICE AGAIN WILL BE "YOUR LIFE AND MY LIFE" FOR YOUR LAND AND MY LAND.

"YOUR LAND AND MY LAND"

The Best Investment On Earth Is In The Earth

DID YOU KNOW THAT MOST OF ALL CAPITAL INVESTMENT, OR WEALTH, IS IN THE LAND? THAT THE DESIRE, FOR MORE LAND FOR EXPANSION, WAS THE CAUSE OF THE TWO LAST GREAT WARS? DID YOU KNOW, THAT IN THE DAYS, WHEN OUR FOREFATHERS WERE GOING WEST IN COVERED WAGONS, MEN AND THEIR FAMILIES WERE SCALPED AND MURDERED IN THEIR DESIRE FOR LAND, THEN THERE WAS NO MONETARY PRICE SET ON LAND, YET THOSE EARLY AMERICANS PAID THE HIGHEST PRICE IT HAS EVER SOLD FOR. THE PRICE THEN "LIFE FOR LAND", NOW ONLY A FEW DOLLARS—NOT YOUR LIFE. IF THE PRIVILEGE TO OWN IT, SHOULD EVER CEASE, THE PRICE AGAIN WILL BE "YOUR LIFE AND MY LIFE" FOR YOUR LAND AND MY LAND.

Dozen Questioned

Misled By Propaganda, Rebel Prisoners Claim

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Prisoners taken during this week's ill-fated Cuban invasion said they had been misled by propaganda from Radio Swan and by rebel broadcasts from North America.

A dozen men, including the son of the Cuban revolutionary chief in exile, were questioned on a television marathon that ended early today in Havana.

At the end of the 6½-hour show, seen in Key West—only 90 miles away — it was announced that these were the first 12 to be interrogated, indicating there may be more such programs.

Jose Miro Torres, whose father, Jose Miro Cardona, is president of the revolutionary council, told questioners that the excursion was a complete failure. He said he was radio operator with the insurgent force.

The prisoners generally responded affirmatively to leading questions about such matters as U. S. complicity in the invasion. Many said "American propaganda" about miserable conditions in Cuba had led them to join the rebels, but that they found conditions in Cuba excellent.

Not so cooperative with the panel of Cuban newsmen was the owner of 750 expropriated acres of land in eastern Cuba. He said he returned to Cuba seeking to restore free enterprise and free elections.

One prisoner said he left Cuba Jan. 23, 1959 with 12 others on a boat. This was less than a month after Fidel Castro took over. The prisoner said he was taken to Vieques an island off Puerto Rico, then to Puerto Rico and finally to New Orleans. Later he stayed at a base in Louisiana for 17 days.

He was trained as a frogman, the prisoner said, and his mission was to mark one of the beaches for the invaders.

A prisoner named Juan, who said he was a 28-year army man and had served under dictator Fulgencio Batista, said he was recruited in Miami this month and left Opa-Locka Air Field on the outskirts of that city on a seven-hour flight.

Juan said he landed at Aeropuerto de Retalhuleu in Guatemala and trained at a camp in a mountainous area, under U. S. instructors. He said he was told daily how bad things were in Cuba and was told that the air force and navy and part of the army and militia was ready to join the invaders.

He said he also was told that all bridges in Cuba had been blown up in preparation for the invasion.

"Was it the general opinion among the mercenaries that there was U. S. help for the invasion?" Miro Torres was asked. He replied: "That is true."

Miro Torres agreed that he had heard in the United States that Cuba was being run by foreigners, but found this to be untrue.

"Have you found a united country?"

"That is true."

Most of those quizzed said they were recruited in Miami, trained in Guatemala or Nicaragua, then proceeded by boat to the invasion site. Some said the five invasion boats flew the Lebanese flag.

Asparagus Now Plentiful

Asparagus and rhubarb, which still are one-season crops, are coming to market in increasing amounts, Richard Skinner, marketing agent with the Co-operative Extension Service in Canfield, reported.

Asparagus is one of the first of the early spring crops which offers a change from the ordinary vegetables. Asparagus is most plentiful from now until late May. Asparagus should be fresh, tender and firm with closed tips.

The closed tips are signs of young, tender stalks. If you buy fresh asparagus that has been snapped rather than cut, you are less likely to get woody stalks. Store asparagus in a moisture proof bag or container in the refrigerator. If you wash the stalks, dry them well before you store them. Moist asparagus has a short life.

Rhubarb is really a vegetable but is usually prepared like a fruit. It can be baked, stewed made into pies or mixed with other fruits.

Rhubarb quality is usually determined by the condition of the stalks. They should be firm, crisp and tender and have a fresh appearance. Good rhubarb is well colored. The rhubarb that is presently on the market is primarily coming from Michigan greenhouses. Ohio-grown rhubarb will be available early in May. Look for price to become lower as local rhubarb reaches the market in more plentiful supply.

Greenhouse tomatoes are again on the market. Prices are high and you can expect to pay 49 cents per pound. Quality will be at its best in late May and June. Prices should drop as the supply increases.

Bananas, oranges and grapefruit provide the bulk of the fruit supply. Orange prices have declined slightly; however, prices are still above a year-ago levels. The grapefruit season will soon be over. Some good quality apples remain on the market. Care should be taken when storing the apples as they will not keep long unless refrigerated.

Poultry and beef cuts continue to lead the meat buys. Look for grocers to continue to feature fryers as an abundant supply comes to market.

Bringing Up A Family

By GARRY C. MEYERS

Early Warning May Halt Tragedy

You see your son, 10, and his playmates gathering tools and materials for making bows and arrows, maybe for making spears. You say to yourself, "What a fine interest and opportunity for hours of good fun and for learning skills." When they have almost finished, you may express your great pride in their achievement. All this while it may never have occurred to you that they will most naturally decide to shoot with these bows and arrows or throw these spears, as soon as possible. You may go about your work thinking only of the fine accomplishment of these boys.

Dr. Garry Meyers

AND SO THE lads may consummate their dreams without ever having had guidance in the safe use of these weapons.

Should you think of the possible dangers, you might warn them to be careful. You might even tell them they must not shoot with the arrows or throw the spears unless you or some other responsible person is present.

But such warning or command won't be easily respected by these boys. You can be pretty sure they will give these weapons a try. So, inexperienced in their safe use, the chances for a tragedy are pretty great.

But if, instead, you either had told these boys at the beginning they must not make these weapons, or had stayed with them to supervise their use, how much wiser you would have been.

SUPPOSE YOU go with your family to a country place next summer, and you know that two boys, 14 and 16, close by have guns with which they have learned to hunt safely. Suppose you have two boys, 12 and 15, who have never been taught to handle guns.

You can be pretty sure your boys will find a way to handle these other boys' guns. Almost in the twinkling of an eye, one of your boys may shoot somebody or himself while examining them.

If you had used foresight, you would have persuaded these neighbor boys to keep their guns locked up or out of reach or sight when your boys were around. Moreover, if you wished to train your own boys in the safe use of guns elsewhere, you would supervise them strictly or have someone else do so.

You see two of your children in a pillow fight in a room where vases and other breakables are. Why wait till something is broken? Why warn them to be careful? You know the danger. Why not stop the fight at once?

$994,461 Sought By Family In Radiation Case

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Death and misery came to the Preston Mitchell Ranch in slow stages two years ago.

Many of his sheep became sick and died. Others staggered drunkenly around the rolling hill country of the Wyoming-South Dakota border area. In all, 127 of the animals died. The Mitchells sold 327 others.

Then Mitchell, his wife Laura and their six children also were afflicted with a strange malady. Their hair fell out. They became violently ill, apparently without cause.

These claims and others were made Friday in a U. S. District Court suit in which attorneys for the Alladin, Wyo., family ask $994,461 in damages from the federal government.

Without detailing the claim, attorneys for the family say that negligent handling of radioactive material by Atomic Energy Commission personnel caused a radioactive fallout on the Mitchell Ranch on April 17, 1959.

Bettis Describes Ohio Small Loan Bill As 'Unjust'

State Rep. Warren Bettis today said he voted against a House-approved measure this week which provides an increase in the rate of interest charged by small loan companies because it is "unjust."

"In such times when the working man has a difficult time in putting food on the table, it appears to me to be unjust and unnecessary for small loan firms to take unfair advantage as they do in this bill," he commented.

"Now a person who borrows from such a firm a sum between $500 and $1,000 must pay 24 per cent interest a year, and on a sum between $1,000 to $2,000, must pay 16 per cent," he said.

"Such legislation as this is obviously class legislation and in the interest of a particular group at the expense of the majority of citizens in the state.

"I think," he declared, "it is about time that the legislators, who claim to represent all the people, should be willing to stand up and be counted."

Bettis voted in favor of a bill providing an increase in the maximum sentence for anyone convicted of rape or attempted rape of a female under 16. He said persons who commit such offenses are "sick," and if they don't choose to seek treatment, they should be kept from leaving scars on young girls.

Bettis also backed a bill which provides a return to the former procedure of filling a vacancy for county commissioner — with the probate judge, county auditor and county recorder making the appointment.

How to Banish the BLUES

By ROBERT L. MEINEKER, M.D., with Theodore Irwin

AT ONE TIME or another, most of us have a bout with the blues. Failure to be invited to a party, a husband away on a business trip, a disapproving remark by the boss, or sundry other factors send our spirits plummeting. We have a deep-down, out-of-sorts feeling, our efficiency suffers, we take on a don't-care attitude, deprecate ourselves, brood over imaginary mistakes, can't make decisions, and exaggerate our worries about everything.

What can we do about such moods?

First, let's try to understand that a mild depression is normal when we suffer a disappointment or temporarily lose someone or something important to us, whether it's "love" or prestige. A healthy person should be able to spring back in a short time, appreciate himself again, find renewed hope, and gain perspective on the cause of his blues.

In contrast, some people are addicted to the blues, becoming downcast over minor frustrations or disappointments which shouldn't faze them. More serious is the psychotic type of depression, in which the feeling of sadness and worthlessness goes far beyond the gravity of the disappointment that set it off. In extreme cases, the victim may become wholly incapable of coping with life.

Many people appear to have regular sieges of gloom. It may come on the familiar "Blue Monday," which stems from confronting the long week of work, frustrations, or tensions ahead. On the other hand, it may strike on weekends when otherwise-busy people face too much leisure, and an inner compulsion to work develops guilt feelings about being idle.

There are many acceptable ways to snap out of the dumps. Ballerina Danilova, for example, takes a bubble bath. TV actress Arlene Francis goes out alone for a drive in her car. Screen star Jack Carson brushes them off by watching his old movies.

I believe the following suggestions may help break that occasional depression. Some will work for you, others will not, for the roots of the blues generally differ with each individual. Pick the ways that are best for you:

1. Search out the reason for your drooping spirits. Is it trivial or really important? Bring your feelings out in the open by discussing what's bothering you with your spouse, a close friend, or someone else you respect and trust. Sharing problems often makes them seem less ominous.

2. You'll get a quick lift by doing something nice for yourself, such as giving yourself a present. For a woman, it can be a new hat or hairdo; for a man, it may be only a new tie or perhaps the fishing rod you have wanted for a long time.

3. Try varying your pace, sharply altering your routine. A change of scene, even for an afternoon away from home or the office, often cures an attack.

4. Plunge into strenuous action—a fast walk, household chores, or hitting a bucketful of golf balls on a driving range. Avoid a competitive sport because defeat may only deepen your depression. Yet if you have a special skill, such as at bowling, ice skating, or golf, show your strength and prove to yourself that you have something on the ball.

5. Escape from yourself by putting your mind on a movie, a play, an absorbing novel, or a game demanding deep concentration. Artistic expression, such as painting or playing a musical instrument, may also do the trick.

6. Avoid harping on unpleasant past incidents once you realize nothing can be done about them.

7. Stop thinking of yourself as the center of the universe. Consider the problems of your family and friends, and try to appreciate what others have done for you.

8. The most effective antidote for the blues is to give of yourself. Don't be stingy with your resources of time and effort.

9. Instead of sitting and counting your miseries, say "thank you" for what you have. In finding out your own riches, you'll realize that you're not a helpless, hopeless, cast-aside creature.

10. Looking over your life, realize that perhaps you're being selfish in demanding too much from other people or expecting the world to come to you. If you have a driving ambition and want to run the show, you've got to accept full responsibility along with the disappointments. If you prefer passivity, you'll have to give in to others.

11. Stay away from pep pills. Taking such stimulants only means that you're depending on a crutch when actually you have ample emotional reserves within you.

FINALLY, remember that your low-down mood is self-limiting, healed by the passage of time. Your emotions are remarkably resilient so that by tomorrow you'll have bounced back from the blues of today. But if these remedies don't work, consider getting psychiatric help, especially if you increasingly continue to feel depressed.

A little touch of sadness now and then seems to be a common human need. The popularity of blues singers, for example, is an index of the demand for this mood.

Your low spirits are not something unique. In fact, brilliant men and women are most subject to dejection, so you're in good company. Why not relax, confident that you can banish your blues with just a little effort?

Marilyn Monroe, two of Jack Kennedy's sisters and his mother, and such women as Countess d'Ribes and Countess Crispi, who are considered among the best-dressed in international society.

The hardest assignment he ever had was dressing Gene Tierney. "She was a fundamental turning point in my life," he recalls. "I was deeply in love with her, and I was inspired to make her even more beautiful. Like every young girl, she had her own ideas about clothes and thought she knew her own style and wanted me to design ruffled, youthful dresses. Then, as now, I knew the secret of elegance is utter simplicity and underplaying. After a while, I dominated her viewpoint, but not without struggle."

The easiest client he has ever had was Marilyn Monroe. "She would accept everything I showed her. The idea here was not to take advantage of her obvious attributes and yet to display them adequately. Marilyn Monroe will never look like the Duchess of Windsor and she likes it that way. Yet it was interesting making her chic as well."

GRACE KELLY was another kind of problem. Fundamentally a serious actress, she thought of clothes only for performances, and in private life at that time tended to like flat heels, glasses, and comfortable old sweaters and skirts. "Old clothes are like old friends," was her favorite remark. Cassini's job was to interest her in clothes, to encourage her to take more than a passing interest in how she looked.

In 1938, when he was employed as a designer at Paramount Pictures, he was given a newcomer named Veronica Lake, who was appearing in her first starring picture, "I Wanted Wings." To make her into a vivid personality, he cut her hair in a long peekaboo bob which hid one eye, and put her into clinging dresses. The "Veronica Lake Look" was so widely copied that during the war the Government asked the studio to modify it, because women in war plants couldn't see to do their jobs well with only one eye.

Oleg Cassini: Dress Designer for the First Lady

By ISABELLA TAVES

THE LIGHTS ARE burning late at the White House these days. But they are burning almost as late at 498 Seventh Avenue, New York, where Oleg Cassini, designer selected by Mrs. Jack Kennedy to create her entire wardrobe, is feverishly at work.

These will be the most publicized clothes in the world, seen on TV and reproduced in magazines and newspapers. And Cassini is twice blessed in realizing a designer's dream to have such a woman wearing them —the slim, elegant, beautiful First Lady.

That other leading designers frankly envy the plum is obvious, and the question they and everyone else asks is, "Why?"

There has been a general impression that Cassini, along with scores of other fashion designers, engaged in a kind of open competition to win this distinction. This was never the case. Shortly after the election, Jacqueline Kennedy wrote to several designers asking them to submit sketches for her consideration. The publicity about these requests unleashed a flood of sketches from leading designers and a rash of stories picturing hats, evening gowns, and sportswear that were "ordered" by the President-elect's wife. Everyone wanted to get into the act.

A great sigh of disappointment echoed in the fashion world here and in Paris when Mrs. Kennedy's secretary announced the appointment of Oleg Cassini to be the exclusive White House designer for four years.

"Mrs. Kennedy," the announcement read, "realizes that the clothes she wears are of interest to the public, but she is distressed by the implications of extravagance, of overemphasis of fashion in relation to her life, and of the misuse of her name by firms from whom she has not bought clothes.

"For the next four years, Mrs. Kennedy's clothes will be by Oleg Cassini. They will be designed and made in America. She will buy what is necessary, without extravagance —and you will often see her photographed in the same outfit."

It is not surprising that the dapper, 47-year-old mustached Cassini is in a rosy daze. "Before this happened, I was restless, bored, unchallenged," he says.

Now he works 17 and 18 hours a day, piles appointment on appointment, has his entire staff (he employs 450 people, including his factory workers) in a happy dither, and doesn't know when he will see daylight again.

With the name Oleg Cassini up there on the New Frontier in glittering letters, big-business Bennies in other apparel lines are eagerly knocking on his door, hoping for an inside tip. Editors and reporters from television and the press are deluging him for interviews, and many civic and welfare outfits want him to lend them his name. And through it all are the girls.

CASSINI has never made a secret of the fact that he likes girls. He was married for 10 years to actress Gene Tierney, and his name was linked romantically with Grace Kelly before she became a princess. Now, in addition to the ebullient pleasure of traveling to Washington to talk clothes with Jacqueline Kennedy ("in French, naturally, which is the language of fashion"), he is recognized on the street by girls, receives enthusiastic telephone calls from them, even gets fan mail directed to him in care of the White House.

There are only two flaws in the beautiful picture. One is that he's so busy that he has no time to enjoy being a celebrity. The other is that association with the White House puts a check on his outgoing personality. He has always said what he thought in interviews; now he has to clear it with Press Secretary Salinger. He has taken mischievous delight in giving dresses in his collections slightly suggestive names, and enlivening the showing by commenting, as a low-cut gown goes by: "The natives are restless tonight."

"I've never curbed my mind or tongue," he says. "Now my biggest trial is to be equal to the trust. I have no right or desire to infringe. Yet I'm afraid it will have a permanent effect on my personality!"

Mrs. Kennedy is not the first well-known and beautiful woman for whom he has designed clothes. Among the beauties who have worn Cassini designs are Gene Tierney, Rita Hayworth, Veronica Lake, Grace Kelly,

Little Ellen, the eldest of four children, was the first to enter the handsome new school in their suburb. Her two brothers and sister, as well as her mother and father, waited eagerly for her report on the first day.

"That school cost the taxpayers millions of dollars," said the father over the excited hubbub. "What impressed you the most?"

"Well," Ellen said thoughtfully, "they have separate bathrooms for the boys and girls."

The bank officer was surprised to see the ne'er-do-well son of a rich man come in with a sizable check from his father. "I thought he had cut off your allowance and gone to Florida," the official said.

"That's right, but I telephoned him long-distance and asked for a loan. He said it was the first time I'd ever called him without making it collect, and he was so touched he said I could have the money."

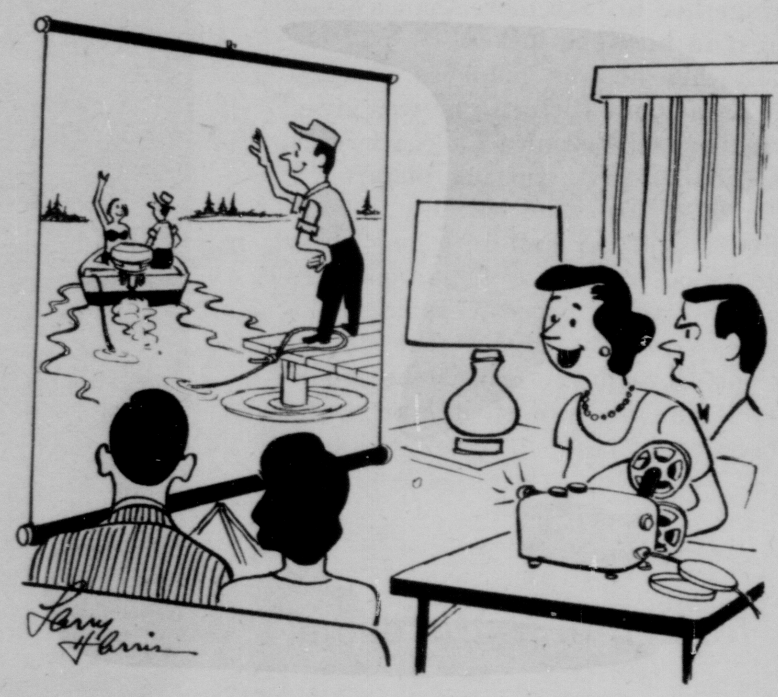

"Well, that call must have made the old man happy," the banker replied.

"Yes," the son sighed, "and I just didn't have the heart to tell him I was phoning from his office."

Five Men Against the Sea

The boat was running helplessly with the winds, coming broadside on the breakers.

By HOWARD EARLE

"YOU MAKE IT to Honolulu or we perish on this island like rats," Capt. Montgomery Sicard of the U.S.S. Saginaw told Coxswain William Halford.

Halford, a swarthy giant with a walrus mustache and thick brown hair, was the last of five volunteers to enter the Saginaw's gig. It was a decked-over 22-foot boat—never built to sail 1,700 miles across the Pacific in raging storms!

The men stranded on Ocean Island that November, 1870, were mostly members of a construction party that had been blasting a harbor. After the party had sailed for San Francisco, Captain Sicard ordered his side-wheel steamer to the island to look for reported castaways, but the Saginaw grounded on treacherous coral reefs and broke in two.

The few supplies that didn't wash out to sea sank to the bottom of the lagoon. They were fished out, dried in the sun, baked, and sealed in tins. The men on the island had been living for three weeks on brown albatross and seal steaks.

But this diet had the men down with dysentery and malnutrition. Their survival depended upon the gig reaching Honolulu and dispatching aid.

With four others, Halford set sail for Honolulu with the salvaged can goods, 90 gallons of fresh water, a crude cooking apparatus, and a lighted lantern. There were no matches.

The first night out Seaman James Muir thrust a knife into a can of beans. There was a sudden pop, a quick wheeze. A foul odor drifted through the boat. Two more cans of beans, a tin of rice, and three cans of grits popped, wheezed, and emitted the same foul odor. All spoiled!

"We'll have to go back," Muir blurted.

"Never," bellowed Halford. "We'll eat the stuff if it kills us!" It nearly did, and the remainder went overboard.

Violent storms raked the ocean, making a plaything of the little boat. Halford spent most of his time at the tiller. The others were too sick to spell him. One day he sighted a huge log beyond the gig's bow. He fought to avoid it, but the wind and waves were too much for him. The gig shuddered as her bottom struck. She stood fully awash, teetering crazily. Then a roller swept in and lifted the boat over.

Succeeding storms opened more seams. The men bailed continuously, and the skin between their fingers and toes split. Their joints, continually wet, stiffened and throbbed.

Twenty-eight days out of Ocean Island, Halford scanned the horizon in the first clear light of dawn. His heart leaped. "Land! Land!" he screamed.

But the wind and the sea were not done with him. The wind hauled around to the southwest and blew up a gale. For three days land lay in sight, but they couldn't reach it. Near the close of the third day, Halford went below to sleep but was jolted awake by the gig's motion.

The boat was running before the wind, close to the outer line of breakers. She came out broadside on the breakers and pitched over, catapulting Halford into the sea.

Halford climbed on the gig's bottom and ripped off his water-soaked clothes. He clung to the boat as the sea tossed it like a barrel in a whirlpool. He got the boat righted and steered it into a quiet channel.

A STARVED, naked skeleton, Halford waded ashore at Kalichi Kai, Hawaii, after 31 days at sea. He brought the gig into port dismasted, waterlogged, and stove in at the bow after a 1,700-mile voyage through fierce storms.

Exhausted and crippled by a splinter in his knee, Halford dropped on the sands and slept until a hot sun awakened him. Then he staggered over the island and found natives who recovered the bodies of the others. Halford sailed to Honolulu and reported to the U. S. Consul. All hands were rescued from Ocean Island.

Halford was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor. Years later, when America entered World War I, Halford at 75 was recalled to active duty and commissioned a lieutenant, senior grade. The Government accorded him a final honor in January, 1943, when a destroyer was christened the U.S.S. William Halford.

Still on exhibit at the U.S. Naval Academy are the Saginaw's gig and sextant, together with a plaque commemorating the gallantry of the men who sailed her.

Too Much?

By JOSEPH NEWTON

SEVERAL MONTHS AGO, I accompanied my wife to a local department store to pick out a wedding gift for the daughter of a casual friend. We visited the "Wedding Bureau" of the store, where the prospective bride and groom had registered their preferences for all types of gifts.

On the surface, this seems like a reasonable sort of thing. It prevents the couple from getting a hodgepodge of gifts that have to be exchanged, and makes selection easier. But a more thoughtful examination raises some doubts.

Take the gift we were seeking. We were greeted in the "Wedding Bureau" by a well-tailored lady who looked up our couple in an ostentatious, gold-crested registration book. She then informed us we could buy the bride and groom a place setting of silver (for $27), a setting of china (for $23), or if we didn't want to go quite that high, we could buy a piece of crystal for only $12.

"What," I asked, "if we don't want to go that high?"

"Look," I explained, "this is for the daughter of a casual business friend. We scarcely know her. We just want to say 'good luck' in an unpretentious sort of way."

After several minutes of disapproving research, she told us that the most economical item we could buy within the couple's registered preferences was a towel—for $5. My wife and I have been married 17 years and have never owned a $5 towel, but we settled for the towel, anyway.

I was curious enough to take a look at the gifts after the reception (to which our towel won us an invitation). The room where the gifts were displayed looked like a well-stocked Fifth Avenue shop. There must have been several thousand dollars worth of expensive luxury items. And this was no society wedding. I suspect that the parents had never owned—or ever expect to own—three-fourths of the items their children collected.

Since then, I've attended other wedding receptions to satisfy the same curiosity. They're all alike—loaded with expensive loot piled high, wide, and handsome. And not just from close friends and relatives, but much of it from casual friends and business acquaintances.

I understand now what a minister friend of ours meant when he said: "Sometimes I think I should begin the ceremony with: 'Dearly beloved, casual acquaintances, and business associates of the parents, we are gathered here in the presence of a complete set of silver, china, glassware, and linen to join in holy matrimony . . .'"

ONE-THIRD of the 15 million marriages taking place in the United States this year will be large, formal assemblages of 100 to 300 guests, costing from $1,500 up—but averaging about $3,000. A recent survey of 1,000 middle-income families showed that the bride's father spent 20 percent of his gross annual income to marry off his daughter.

Fathers often go deep in debt to give their daughters opulent weddings. And the largesse seldom stops there. With growing frequency, it extends into putting the married couples through college and setting them up in housekeeping in a manner far beyond their immediate means.

What's the purpose of this plush system by which we inundate our children with expensive gifts? Is this really the way to help them find self-respect and live a full and purposeful life?

There's an immense amount of satisfaction in earning the good things of life. Many of today's youngsters have never had the chance. They're handed so many luxuries as gifts that the effort to live up to them becomes an end in itself in which they completely lose sight of standards vastly more important to them as adults.

This lather of gifts neither starts nor ends with the wedding. Thousands of parents have gone along passively with the growing incidence of young people who marry in college and matriculate in connubial bliss—often on the old man's checking account.

Today, one of every four college students is married—bringing about a whole new set of social problems and questions. Often these youngsters plunge into marriage with only the vaguest idea of what it will cost and where the money is coming from. And studies made in colleges show that two decidedly can't live as cheaply as one—even on a collegiate shoestring. It costs the average married couple in college—cutting all economy corners—between $300 and $400 a month to survive. This means one of two things: either the parents hand it out to them or the wife must work—or both.

I know of one young couple receiving money from the parents of each—with neither set of parents aware that the other is contributing.

One couple made a sizable downpayment on a home and turned over the mortgage and the key to the young marrieds as a belated wedding present when they finished college. The young man got a job that offered fine promise but a modest starting salary that did not permit him to furnish the house properly or maintain the mortgage payments without strain.

The couple was in continuous, nerve-grating financial straits—yet they felt that giving up the house would be an act of ingratitude and an admission of failure. They superficially resolved their problems when the young man quit his job and went to work for his wife's father at a considerable salary he should not yet command.

Result: the young man is doing work he doesn't like, and relations between the husband and wife are uneasy.

Not too many years ago, the working youngster was expected to contribute to the family finances. Now, this is not only seldom expected of him, but he is usually given a handout to supplement his earned income. This is not to suggest that we should go back to the days of the sweatshop; but we certainly do need to draw a new perspective on the problem instead of drifting into ever-larger subsidies for young people.

The saddest thing of all is that generally the motive of the parents and friends doling out these expensive gifts and subsidies is an earnest desire to help the youngsters. And far too often, it has just the opposite effect. It sets a standard for young people in their formative years that they can't hope to maintain when they are "on their own."

Many thoughtful Americans are deeply concerned about this situation. Psychiatrist Jerome D. Frank said recently: "Our goal as parents is not to produce adults who are continually serene but individuals who are able to distill strength and wisdom from the vicissitudes of life. Basking in creature comfort as we do, we are more apt to resent the inevitable hardships and sufferings of life and perhaps are more easily demoralized by them than members of less materially favored societies.

"A cornerstone of mental health, as I see it, is the ability to deal confidently with new experiences and profit from them. A child develops this ability best through having to cope with problems."

Hanson Baldwin, military editor of the New York Times, sees this toughness slipping away. And it worries him. He says: "The American man has been pampered. The extremely high standards of American life and the sheltered environment contrast strongly with the stark life in Russia and Red China, where hard work takes precedence over security. Can American man—after years of protective conditioning—vie with this barbarian who has lived by his wits, his initiative, his brawn?"

THE ONLY possible answer is that parents need to take stock of the moral and mental toughening of their children. They need to ask themselves: are we giving our young people too much, making it too easy for them, endowing them with a false set of values and standards? Are we setting a good example for them in these respects?

There's no easy answer to these questions. We must progress with the times and meet the Space Age and its problems on its own terms. But this doesn't mean giving our kids the world on a flying saucer—especially when they're first starting out and are eager and able to make their own conquests.

When and How to Help Your Children

It's natural and normal for parents to want to help their children even after they're married, says Dr. Freda S. Kehm, director of the Association for Family Living in Chicago. But it's important, she cautions, to guard against overindulging them. Here are her common-sense suggestions:

1. Make the subsidy fit the situation. In other words, don't offer a young couple gifts or "handouts" that are beyond their means to maintain or that will require them to scale a false ladder of material values so that they may use them.

2. Set an example of wise spending, sound credit, and moral and ethical values for your children to emulate. Young people raised in an atmosphere of extreme materialism can hardly be expected to adopt high values.

3. Stand firm against that most persuasive of all arguments: "Everyone else is doing it." Don't let "everyone else" dictate your family policies or coerce you into sacrificing your own good judgment or sense of principle.

4. Finally, don't deprive your children of the satisfaction of earning for themselves the things they really want. Every young American deserves to experience the sense of accomplishment that comes with attaining desirable goals and possessions by himself. If he suffers a few bumps and bruises along the way, they're part of the experience of growing up.

Newlyweds

that the effort to live up to them becomes an end in itself in which they completely lose sight of standards vastly more important to them as adults.

This lather of gifts neither starts nor ends with the wedding. Thousands of parents have gone along passively with the growing incidence of young people who marry in college and matriculate in connubial bliss—often on the old man's checking account.

Today, one of every four college students is married—bringing about a whole new set of social problems and questions. Often these youngsters plunge into marriage with only the vaguest idea of what it will cost and where the money is coming from. And studies made in colleges show that two decidedly can't live as cheaply as one —even on a collegiate shoestring. It costs the average married couple in college—cutting all economy corners—between $300 and $400 a month to survive. This means one of two things: either the parents hand it out to them or the wife must work—or both.

I know of one young couple receiving money from the parents of each—with neither set of parents aware that the other is contributing.

One couple made a sizable downpayment on a home and turned over the mortgage and the key to the young marrieds as a belated wedding present when they finished college. The young man got a job that offered fine promise but a modest starting salary that did not permit him to furnish the house properly or maintain the mortgage payments without strain.

The couple was in continuous, nerve-grating financial straits—yet they felt that giving up the house would be an act of ingratitude and an admission of failure. They superficially resolved their problems when the young man quit his job and went to work for his wife's father at a considerable salary he should not yet command.

Result: the young man is doing work he doesn't like, and relations between the husband and wife are uneasy.

Not too many years ago, the working youngster was expected to contribute to the family finances. Now, this is not only seldom expected of him, but he is usually given a handout to supplement his earned income. This is not to suggest that we should go back to the days of the sweatshop; but we certainly do need to draw a new perspective on the problem instead of drifting into ever-larger subsidies for young people.

The saddest thing of all is that generally the motive of the parents and friends doling out these expensive gifts and subsidies is an earnest desire to help the youngsters. And far too often,

Oleg Cassini

The greatest disaster of his movie career came when he had the chance to create a dance dress for Rita Hayworth in "Tales of Manhattan." He designed a white chiffon dress with two bands of chiffon crossing over the bodice, one purple, the other light blue. When Rita got in front of the camera, the purple was so dark that it vanished, making her look as though she had lost half her bosom. It, and Cassini, were promptly thrown out of the picture.

Born in Paris, Oleg Cassini was educated in Italy; his mother is Russian refugee Countess Marguerite Cassini, who had a design studio in Florence when her sons were going to school, and his brother is Igor Cassini, who writes a syndicated newspaper-society column.

Oleg studied law, was an ardent amateur painter, and as a young boy paid for trips to Paris by making sketches of the collections for his mother.

He Becomes a Hollywood Designer

In 1936, fascism drove them to take refuge in America. For two years, he had a design studio in New York, doing custom work for the society women he had met abroad. Then, in 1938, he went to Hollywood, where he worked for both Paramount and 20th Century-Fox, and married the lovely Gene Tierney. Although they have been divorced 10 years, and their 12-year-old daughter Tina, now lives with her father, he continues to design clothes for his ex-wife, now remarried, and they are good friends.

Their marriage foundered on their long separation during the war (he was in the cavalry, going in a private, rising to captain), his impatience with Hollywood when he came out of the Army ("They gave me a horse opera named 'Green Grass of Wyoming' as my first job. I told them I'd spent four and a half years with horses, and I didn't know why I had to come back and design blankets for horses in the movies"), his desire to move back to New York, and Gene's determination to stay in Hollywood for the sake of her career.

In June, 1950, he opened his own business in New York, which included both custom-made clothes for individual customers and a commercial line of ready-made Oleg Cassini clothes which are sold in stores all over the United States starting at $90. He had immediate success.

"To be really elegant, you need monastic dignity," Cassini advises women. "I think if there is one piece of advice I would readily give to women in general, it's be simple; take off accessories and bows instead of adding them.

"The second is to study yourself, know what is right and what is wrong for your particular type. Then, when buying clothes, use a selective attitude. Don't let salespeople bully you into taking something which isn't right. In this way, you will find yourself achieving what should be every woman's goal, a style of her own which pays no attention to fad."

Jacqueline Kennedy usually wore clothes made by French designers, notably Givenchy and Balenciaga, before she selected Cassini to do her wardrobe. Her decision to buy American clothes was in line with the whole "buy American" trend on the New Frontier.

Won't Follow Paris Fashions

Cassini had never made clothes for her before, and only occasionally for Mrs. Joseph Kennedy and the Kennedy sisters. He had known Jacqueline socially and understood the kind of life she lives, but that is not what admirers of Cassini find significant in her final decision. He has been one of the few American designers who have refused to follow the trend of hurrying to Paris for the openings there, and letting them supply inspiration for their clothes. "I go to Europe for the skiing," he says, "not to copy somebody else's ideas.

"We have allowed the French couture to take the leadership too long," he says. "We haven't tried to be original in spirit; we have simply picked their brains, adapting their ideas, sometimes copying their individual dresses with hardly any changes.

"That is why many deeply fashion-conscious women go to the great dressmakers of Paris and buy their clothes. These originals are beautiful, always exquisitely fitted. But for the woman who can't afford the originals, the French copies, the ones they are sending to us for the mass market, are cheap, badly made, shoddy merchandise. A woman who wants her money's worth is much better off buying well-made American clothes."

Cassini adds: "I do not propose to tell Mrs. Kennedy what to wear; and I do not believe she plans to tell me what to design. Our relationship will be one in which I propose and she disposes. Thus it is necessary for me to be familiar with both the woman and the world in which she moves."

Jacqueline Shines at Inaugural

One of the major impacts he made on fashion was when he designed Mrs. Kennedy's fawn beige costume for Inauguration Day. While nearly every other woman on television was bundled in fur, Mrs. Kennedy's coat, with its discreet flare, its sable muff, and its daringly modest circlet of sable at the throat, was sensational. It was also the result of Cassini's long experience in designing for the camera, the cruel camera which seems to add about 10 pounds to a woman's weight unless she is dressed properly for it. The women who wore luxurious minks and chinchillas looked bulky. The First Lady was slim, lovely, everything pointing toward her beautiful face.

The fur industry may hate Cassini for what he did, but he is prepared for the bitterness of competitors who have tasted deep of the sour grapes. Says he:

"It's easy to be very considerate and kind when you are a success. The trick is to be arrogant when things are going badly."

THE AGE of specialization hit me right between the gas pumps the other day.

While my car was having five gallons, a man drove in to leave his to be washed.

A few weeks later one of the tires on my car went flat half a block from another station. I was overjoyed at the proximity until I trudged over and found the attendants there never leave the station to change a tire, even if a squad of 40 is on duty. I was able to prevail only by falling on the cement and loosening a flood of tears in the antifreeze.

Many of my friends have a dentist for tooth-cleaning, another for tooth-pulling, and a third who peers into miniature cavities of their offspring. And it's well-known, of course, that general practitioners of medicine have gone to a just reward. They have been succeeded by eye men, ear men, tonsil men, and men whose field is confined to the third toe on the left foot.

Specialization has covered the country like a coat of many colors. Even in my business. I'm a column writer, so I do not compose sonnets, interview athletes, or write copy for tooth paste. And even this column is limited to the obscure byways of my lost thoughts.

Recently, and with some timidity, I entered a drugstore to buy a drug. In such times as these, I expected to be confronted by nothing except rows of ipecac and bianthrozolomine.

But there were life preservers, plastic dishes, monkey wrenches, and baby dolls. There were picnic kits and cotton knits and goldfish bowls and catnip balls.

In 1936, fascism drove them to take refuge in America. For two years, he had a design studio in New York, doing custom work for the society women he had met abroad. Then, in 1938, he went to Hollywood, where he worked for both Paramount and 20th Century-Fox, and married the lovely Gene Tierney. Although they have been divorced 10 years, and their 12-year-old daughter Tina, now lives with her father, he continues to design clothes for his ex-wife, now remarried, and they are good friends.

Their marriage foundered on their long separation during the war (he was in the cavalry, going in a private, rising to captain), his impatience with Hollywood when he came out of the Army ("They gave me a horse opera named 'Green Grass of Wyoming' as my first job. I told them I'd spent four and a half years with horses, and I didn't know why I had to come back and design blankets for horses in the movies"), his desire to move back to New York, and Gene's determination to stay in Hollywood for the sake of her career.

In June, 1950, he opened his own business in New York, which included both custom-made clothes for individual customers and a commercial line of ready-made Oleg Cassini clothes which are sold in stores all over the United States starting at $90. He had immediate success.

"To be really elegant, you need monastic dignity," Cassini advises women. "I think if there is one piece of advice I would readily give to women in general, it's be simple; take off accessories and bows instead of adding them.

"The second is to study yourself, know what is right and what is wrong for your particular type. Then, when buying clothes, use a selective attitude. Don't let salespeople bully you into taking something which isn't right. In this way, you will find yourself achieving what should be every woman's goal, a style of her own which pays no attention to fad."

Jacqueline Kennedy usually wore clothes made by French designers, notably Givenchy and Balenciaga, before she selected Cassini to do her wardrobe. Her decision to buy American clothes was in line with the whole "buy American" trend on the New Frontier.

Won't Follow Paris Fashions

Cassini had never made clothes for her before, and only occasionally for Mrs. Joseph Kennedy and the Kennedy sisters. He had known Jacqueline socially and understood the kind of life she lives, but that is not what admirers of Cassini find significant in her final decision. He has been one of the few American designers who have refused to follow the trend of hurrying to Paris for the openings there, and letting them supply inspiration for their clothes. "I go to Europe for the skiing," he says, "not to copy somebody else's ideas.

"We have allowed the French couture to take the leadership too long," he says. "We haven't tried to be original in spirit; we have simply picked their brains, adapting their ideas, sometimes copying their individual dresses with hardly any changes.

"That is why many deeply fashion-conscious women go to the great dressmakers of Paris and buy their clothes. These originals are beautiful, always exquisitely fitted. But for the woman who can't afford the originals, the French copies, the ones they are sending to us for the mass market, are cheap, badly made, shoddy merchandise. A woman who wants her money's worth is much better off buying well-made American clothes."

Cassini adds: "I do not propose to tell Mrs. Kennedy what to wear; and I do not believe she plans to tell me what to design. Our relationship will be one in which I propose and she disposes. Thus it is necessary for me to be familiar with both the woman and the world in which she moves."

Jacqueline Shines at Inaugural

One of the major impacts he made on fashion was when he designed Mrs. Kennedy's fawn beige costume for Inauguration Day. While nearly every other woman on television was bundled in fur, Mrs. Kennedy's coat, with its discreet flare, its sable muff, and its daringly modest circlet of sable at the throat, was sensational. It was also the result of Cassini's long experience in designing for the camera, the cruel camera which seems to add about 10 pounds to a woman's weight unless she is dressed properly for it. The women who wore luxurious minks and chinchillas looked bulky. The First Lady was slim, lovely, everything pointing toward her beautiful face.

The fur industry may hate Cassini for what he did, but he is prepared for the bitterness of competitors who have tasted deep of the sour grapes. Says he:

"It's easy to be very considerate and kind when you are a success. The trick is to be arrogant when things are going badly."

In Texas, savings have been returned as dividends.

I was just thinking...

THE AGE of specialization hit me right between the gas pumps the other day.

While my car was having five gallons, a man drove in to leave his to be washed.

The man's foot suspended in mid-air. He looked as though he'd been hit on the head with a tire iron.

The man said not a word. He got back in his dirty car and drove away.

A few weeks later one of the tires on my car went flat half a block from another station. I was overjoyed at the proximity until I trudged over and found the attendants there never leave the station to change a tire, even if a squad of 40 is on duty. I was able to prevail only by falling on the cement and loosening a flood of tears in the antifreeze.

Many of my friends have a dentist for tooth-cleaning, another for tooth-pulling, and a third who peers into miniature cavities of their offspring. And it's well-known, of course, that general practitioners of medicine have gone to a just reward. They have been succeeded by eye men, ear men, tonsil men, and men whose field is confined to the third toe on the left foot.

Specialization has covered the country like a coat of many colors. Even in my business. I'm a column writer, so I do not compose sonnets, interview athletes, or write copy for tooth paste. And even this column is limited to the obscure byways of my lost thoughts.

Recently, and with some timidity, I entered a drugstore to buy a drug. In such times as these, I expected to be confronted by nothing except rows of ipecac and bianthrozolomine.

But there were life preservers, plastic dishes, monkey wrenches, and baby dolls. There were picnic kits and cotton knits and goldfish bowls and catnip balls.

For aspirin, I went to the cafe on the corner.

Leo Durocher Says: "I'm Glad to Be Back in Baseball"

Six years ago, he thought the game couldn't offer him any more; now he knows differently, and even a secondary job brings back that famous old fire

By JOSEPH N. BELL

In his new role as Dodger coach, Leo Durocher points out bunting flaws to rookie outfielder Ron Fairly.

EVER SINCE Leo Durocher left baseball in 1955, sports writers have had to strain for the colorful copy his antics once provided by the ream. This spring, the easy smiles are back on the sports scribes' faces. Leo is back in baseball making the big banner headlines.

He stopped presses all over the country early this year when he accepted the lowly (for him) job as a coach with his old Dodgers, then of Brooklyn, now of Los Angeles. Said Durocher: "I had been out of work for 15 months and I needed a job. Besides, I was just about ready to give my right arm to get back into baseball."

The furor had hardly died down when a New York newspaper screamed in front-page headlines that Leo was suddenly leaving the Dodgers before he had baited his first umpire during the official season to take on the manager's job for the New York "Metropolitans," the new National League club beginning operation in 1962.

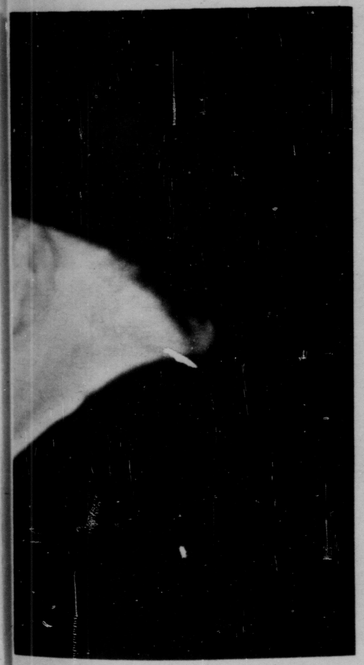

Durocher and George Weiss, president of the Mets, issued vehement denials of the story, as did the Dodger brass. The reporter who broke the exclusive, while not revealing who leaked the news to him, assured us his story "was no pipe dream," no matter how heated the denials. Even as this story was being written, there was the possibility the volatile Durocher will be scouring the country for Met ballplayers rather than traffic-copping base runners in Los Angeles. If not now, it seems a reasonable guess that Leo will sign as manager of the Mets before next spring.

No matter where he is for the balance of the '61 season, Leo is back with a bang and glad of it. The controversy proves it.

A few years ago, Durocher was saying he would never again put on a baseball uniform for a salary, no matter how large. He insisted that only part ownership in a club could bring him back.

"During my six years out of baseball, I found that money isn't everything. To me, being back is everything."

Baseball was everything to Leo until 1955. By then, however, he'd done just about everything an ambitious man could do in the game—except own a club. He'd starred on the field, managed pennant winners in Brooklyn and New York, and finally copped a World Series for the Giants.

Still ambitious and always cocky, he looked for new fields to conquer and ended up with the National Broadcasting Company. He tried acting and was an admitted failure. He did better at sportcasts but wasn't happy.

Durocher and NBC parted company at the end of the baseball season in 1959, and he has been literally out of work ever since. For 15 months, everything was going out, and nothing was coming in.

"But I found out then what loyal friends I had," says Leo. "Dozens of them called to offer help and to make sure I was all right. I knew then that baseball was my life, and I wanted to get back to it.

"But the statements I'd made a few years earlier that I wasn't interested in returning to baseball on any sort of salary basis hurt me—even though I told anyone who would listen that it was no longer true. The Dodgers were the only club that believed me enough to make a concrete proposal, and I'll always be grateful to Walter O'Malley, Buzzie Bavasi,and Walt Alston because of it.

"I didn't have to negotiate with them. I didn't even discuss terms with Bavasi. I just told him: 'Forget about a contract. Your word is good enough for me.' And that's the way it was."

WHICH LEADS US to what sports writers have euphemistically labeled an "uncomfortable situation"—that is, Durocher's working under Walter Alston, who right now is the senior major-league manager.

"Nobody had to tell me that my being around could make a delicate situation for Alston," he says. But Durocher contends that those who are predicting this "situation" will finally blow up just don't understand—or won't concede—three points:

1. Leo is capable of stout personal loyalty. "When I work for a manager," he says, "he's the greatest manager in baseball. I'm happy and gratified to be working with Walter as a coach, and I'm delighted to be with the Dodgers."

2. Durocher likes it in California. Los Angeles is his home, and most of his friends are there. Working for the Dodgers makes it possible for Durocher to live on the Coast.

3. Durocher has shown, at least in spring training, that he's able to subordinate himself to Alston, as a coach must. He hasn't popped off. He has made statements only in general press conferences. He hasn't second-guessed. He has contributed his advice and considerable baseball knowledge, not through the newspapers but in the privacy of clubhouse staff meetings.

All this makes it seem like a good bet that Leo will finish the season with the Dodgers, but by the same token, Leo has always been hard to handicap.

HE INSISTS that no writer is going to get a single unguarded word from him by jockeying him to one side and whispering, "What do you really think, Leo?" His determination on this point is judicious. During the press conference at which Durocher's appointment was announced, Buzzie Bavasi, in reply to a question from a reporter, looked straight at Leo and said: "The first time I read in the papers where you have second-guessed Walt, that's it."

This arouses no rancor in Durocher. He knows that's the way it has to be. He wouldn't tolerate second-guessing from a coach when he was managing, and he doesn't expect Alston to. Durocher knows the rules, and thus far he gives every indication that he intends to abide by them. However, that doesn't mean he's wearing a halo on the playing field. Nor does the Dodger management want him to.

Alston says of Durocher: "We've got Leo on our side again, and I'm glad to have him with us. He'll direct traffic at third base, and he'll help us in a lot of other ways, particularly in instructing all our kids in the fundamentals of baseball. I plan to let him do his usual amount of talking. It may be that's what this ball club needs. We can use a man with enthusiasm and spirit. I don't resent it; I'm glad to have it on my staff."

Avoiding the limelight has proved impossible for the fiery Leo even though he insists he wants to take a back seat.

When questioned about leaving the Dodgers to manage the Mets, he said: "I wish they'd just leave me alone for a while. I'm happy where I am. I know how good baseball has been to me, and I'm so glad to be back that I'll do almost anything to make sure that this time I stay."

He sounds as if he means every word of it, whether in New York or Los Angeles.

- 2 cinnamon sticks

1. Put oranges into a large saucepan; cover with boiling water and simmer, uncovered, about 15 min., or until tender. Drain and cut each orange into quarters.
2. Meanwhile, combine in a 3-qt. saucepan the sugar, 1½ cups water, vinegar, and corn sirup. Stir over low heat until sugar is completely dissolved. Add the cloves and cinnamon and bring mixture to boiling. Boil vigorously, uncovered, without stirring, 15 to 18 min., or until sirup thickens and begins to turn a light golden color.
3. Immediately remove saucepan from heat and add the orange quarters; turn pieces to glaze evenly. Turn mixture into a bowl to cool completely, turning pieces occasionally. Chill until ready to serve. About 12 servings

Note: Preserved oranges may be stored indefinitely in covered jars in refrigerator.

2. Sprinkle gelatin evenly over water. Let stand 5 to 10 min. to soften. Dissolve gelatin over very hot water.
3. Put sugar, salt, and horse-radish into a saucepan and heat, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Stir gelatin and blend it in. Remove from heat; cool. Chill until slightly thickened, stirring occasionally.
4. Fold whipped cream into horse-radish mixture.
5. Turn into the mold. Chill until firm. Unmold onto chilled serving plate. 3-cup mold

Still ambitious and always cocky, he looked for new fields to conquer and ended up with the National Broadcasting Company. He tried acting and was an admitted failure. He did better at sportcasts but wasn't happy.

Durocher and NBC parted company at the end of the baseball season in 1959, and he has been literally out of work ever since. For 15 months, everything was going out, and nothing was coming in.

"But I found out then what loyal friends I had," says Leo. "Dozens of them called to offer help and to make sure I was all right. I knew then that baseball was my life, and I wanted to get back to it.

"But the statements I'd made a few years earlier that I wasn't interested in returning to baseball on any sort of salary basis hurt me—even though I told anyone who would listen that it was no longer true. The Dodgers were the only club that believed me enough to make a concrete proposal, and I'll always be grateful to Walter O'Malley, Buzzie Bavasi,and Walt Alston because of it.

"I didn't have to negotiate with them. I didn't even discuss terms with Bavasi. I just told him: 'Forget about a contract. Your word is good enough for me.' And that's the way it was."

WHICH LEADS US to what sports writers have euphemistically labeled an "uncomfortable situation"—that is, Durocher's working under Walter Alston, who right now is the senior major-league manager.

"Nobody had to tell me that my being around could make a delicate situation for Alston," he says. But Durocher contends that those who are predicting this "situation" will finally blow up just don't understand—or won't concede—three points:

1. Leo is capable of stout personal loyalty. "When I work for a manager," he says, "he's the greatest manager in baseball. I'm happy and gratified to be working with Walter as a coach, and I'm delighted to be with the Dodgers."

2. Durocher likes it in California. Los Angeles is his home, and most of his friends are there. Working for the Dodgers makes it possible for Durocher to live on the Coast.

3. Durocher has shown, at least in spring training, that he's able to subordinate himself to Alston, as a coach must. He hasn't popped off. He has made statements only in general press conferences. He hasn't second-guessed. He has contributed his advice and considerable baseball knowledge, not through the newspapers but in the privacy of clubhouse staff meetings.

All this makes it seem like a good bet that Leo will finish the season with the Dodgers, but by the same token, Leo has always been hard to handicap.

HE INSISTS that no writer is going to get a single unguarded word from him by jockeying him to one side and whispering, "What do you really think, Leo?" His determination on this point is judicious. During the press conference at which Durocher's appointment was announced, Buzzie Bavasi, in reply to a question from a reporter, looked straight at Leo and said: "The first time I read in the papers where you have second-guessed Walt, that's it."

This arouses no rancor in Durocher. He knows that's the way it has to be. He wouldn't tolerate second-guessing from a coach when he was managing, and he doesn't expect Alston to. Durocher knows the rules, and thus far he gives every indication that he intends to abide by them. However, that doesn't mean he's wearing a halo on the playing field. Nor does the Dodger management want him to.

Alston says of Durocher: "We've got Leo on our side again, and I'm glad to have him with us. He'll direct traffic at third base, and he'll help us in a lot of other ways, particularly in instructing all our kids in the fundamentals of baseball. I plan to let him do his usual amount of talking. It may be that's what this ball club needs. We can use a man with enthusiasm and spirit. I don't resent it; I'm glad to have it on my staff."

Avoiding the limelight has proved impossible for the fiery Leo even though he insists he wants to take a back seat.

When questioned about leaving the Dodgers to manage the Mets, he said: "I wish they'd just leave me alone for a while. I'm happy where I am. I know how good baseball has been to me, and I'm so glad to be back that I'll do almost anything to make sure that this time I stay."

He sounds as if he means every word of it, whether in New York or Los Angeles.

What's needed is (1) to dry up the excessive oil that collects on skin; (2) to destroy acne germs on the skin, and (3) to stop itching and irritation so pimples can heal.

Leo Durocher Says: "I'm Glad to Be Back in Baseball"

Six years ago, he thought the game couldn't offer him any more; now he knows differently, and even a secondary job brings back that famous old fire

By JOSEPH N. BELL

EVER SINCE Leo Durocher left baseball in 1955, sports writers have had to strain for the colorful copy his antics once provided by the ream. This spring, the easy smiles are back on the sports scribes' faces. Leo is back in baseball making the big banner headlines.

He stopped presses all over the country early this year when he accepted the lowly (for him) job as a coach with his old Dodgers, then of Brooklyn, now of Los Angeles. Said Durocher: "I had been out of work for 15 months and I needed a job. Besides, I was just about ready to give my right arm to get back into baseball."

The furor had hardly died down when a New York newspaper screamed in front-page headlines that Leo was suddenly leaving the Dodgers before he had baited his first umpire during the official season to take on the manager's job for the New York "Metropolitans," the new National League club beginning operation in 1962.

Durocher and George Weiss, president of the Mets, issued vehement denials of the story, as did the Dodger brass. The reporter who broke the exclusive, while not revealing who leaked the news to him, assured us his story "was no pipe dream," no matter how heated the denials. Even as this story was being written, there was the possibility the volatile Durocher will be scouring the country for Met ballplayers rather than traffic-copping base runners in Los Angeles. If not now, it seems a reasonable guess that Leo will sign as manager of the Mets before next spring.

No matter where he is for the balance of the '61 season, Leo is back with a bang and glad of it. The controversy proves it.

A few years ago, Durocher was saying he would never again put on a baseball uniform for a salary, no matter how large. He insisted that only part ownership in a club could bring him back.

"During my six years out of baseball, I found that money isn't everything. To me, being back is everything."

Baseball was everything to Leo until 1955. By then, however, he'd done just about everything an ambitious man could do in the game—except own a club. He'd starred on the
